Canadian Seamen Buried Alive

ONE BODY IS LOWERED FROM SHIP.

LATER, RESCUE WORKERS BRING THE SECOND TO SHORE.

(Freeman photos by Haines)

CEMENTON
Two Canadian seamen were buried in a grave of gypsum early today while working in the hold of a freighter docked at the Alpha Portland Cement Company plant in Cementon.

Both men were killed. One was recovered shortly after the incident occurred. It took rescue personnel about seven hours to unearth the second body.

The two men, who were not identified, were working in the hold of the 10,000 ton freighter Cape Breton Miner at about midnight when they were buried under a small landslide of gypsum.

Crewmen aboard the ship, employees at the cement company and volunteer rescue personnel worked to free the trapped seamen.

State Police from the Leeds substation in Greene County were told by ship's officers that the gypsum apparently became frozen during the passage from Toronto, Canada to the Hudson River Valley. Four crewmen, preparing the mineral for unloading later today, were attempting to loosen the rock when it gave way.

Two of the crewmen, said troopers, managed to scramble to safety. Two others, including the ship's first mate, were trapped in the landslide.

Other members of the crew began immediate rescue operations. The arm of one of the trapped seamen protruded from the rubble, and his body was the first to be recovered. Using pick axes and shovels, rescue workers found the second body at about 7 a.m.

The Cape Breton Miner, owned by the Leitch Transport Co. of Toronto, was tied up at Alpha's Hudson River dock. Her cargo is a common ingredient in the manufacture of cement products.

Alpha officials would not comment on the incident today and ship's officers were not available. Only the rescue workers and police were allowed on board.

The identities of the two seamen were withheld pending notification of their families. Authorities said both were from Nova Scotia.

Ponckhockie Support Voiced

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

If testimony at last night's public hearing is any indicator, the Community Development Advisory Council will recommend that the city spend most if not all of this year's $1,359,000 in federal funds in the Ponckhockie section of the city with a good portion of that going for acquisition of Kingman Park.

In terms of public participation, last night's public hearing was a distinct improvement over the first public hearing on Community Development priorities, where only four persons spoke at a hearing that lasted less than half an hour. Last night's hearing featured 20 speakers and lasted almost an hour and a half.

Ponckhockie was well represented, but appeals were also heard for:

- Recreation facilities at the old city dump off Summer Street;
- Sidewalks and docking facilities in West Strand;
- Storm drains in the Third Ward, in particular on Glen Street, the Boulevard and Pettit Avenue;
- An overall city program to adapt publicly used buildings for the benefit of the elderly and the handicapped.

The Kingman Park proposal was something entirely new for the Community Development program, which is heavily involved in recreation, based on its 1975 plan, but has done virtually nothing in the area of conservation.

There were several speakers recommending the city acquire and maintain the natural state of Kingman Park, most of which is now owned by the Shults family.

Donald Bruyn, chairman of the Ulster County Environmental Management Council, was the first to address the Community Development Advisory Council on that subject.

Elizabeth Heitzman of 64 Moore Street advocated much the same thing as did Joanne Myers of 75 Brewster Street, who spoke as a member of the Mid-Hudson Chapter of the Sierra Club.

Robert Johnson of West Strand asked the Council to consider docking facilities along the Rondout in West Strand.

He also raised the issue of Project SCORE in West Strand which acquired three buildings from the city some three years ago and has done little to improve them. Johnson said one of the buildings has no roof and could collapse, taking others with it.

Arlene Hendricks of Ponckhockie asked the Advisory Council to consider "pocket parks" for children up to seven years of age in that area of the city.

Benjamin Wigfall of 241 Catherine Street suggested a small cultural center or museum for the Rondout area. "It's a very, very important part of Kingston's history," he said.

Joseph Epstein, who said he's done business in Rondout for 52 years, noted that there once were four banks in the area and 2,000 people working there. "If you can bring back even half of that to Rondout, you'll be doing a swell job," he said.

Epstein also called for the part ition of the five-acre parcel in Broadway East, planned as the site for a shopping plaza but vacant since 1969. "Everything else has failed," he said. Epstein recalled that back in 1967 he put up a $1,000 pledge (along with several other businessmen) with the urban renewal agency to show his "good intentions to start a business in Broadway East." He said the money was returned by the urban renewal agency a year later.

Mrs. Eleanor Sinsabaugh of 36 North Street, called for new sanitary sewers on North Street. "We might as well be back in 1776," she told her husband, Alderman Clifford Sinsabaugh, the presiding officer at the hearing. "We don't even have any sewers (in reference to a previous speaker's request for "improved" sewers on Gill Street). Some of us have septic tanks. Some of us have direct lines into the lagoon."

Questioned after the public hearing, Sinsabaugh said the Advisory Council had not drawn up a program for the city's 1976 application but indicated it would rely heavily on testimony heard at this year's public hearings.

The city has until Feb. 23 to file its application with a state clearing house.

In a related development, the state has returned the city's application on some $300,000 in discretionary funds for the rehabilitation of the old City Hall. That application must be in federal hands for consideration prior to Feb. 13.

Mancuso Fumes, Stampfle Applauds

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

While the uptown businessmen are applauding Mayor Francis R. Koenig's decision to veto the Pike Plan parking ban legislation passed by the Common Council last week, the bill's sponsor, Majority Leader Peter J. Mancuso, D-12th Ward, is seething.

"I'm very disappointed," he said Monday. "The mayor's decision is only a pacification for a couple of uptown businessmen who think they'll be hurt by a parking ban."

"But I wasn't really surprised," Mancuso added, "I anticipated this as early as last Thursday, when the Uptown Businessmen's Association petitioned the mayor for a veto... the 'front office' has always succumbed to the uptown businessmen. There was no reason to believe it wouldn't happen again."

All was not gloom under the canopies on Wall Street Monday, however. "We're very pleased," said UBA President Glenn A. Stampfle. "It was a correct decision on the mayor's part and a decision that was in the best interests of all the citizens of Kingston, especially the elderly."

In announcing Monday that he will veto the parking ban legislation, Koenig emphasized the hardship that it would place on the city's elderly shoppers, many of whom aren't physically able to walk extended distances between parking lots and stores in the uptown district.

"That's a flimsy reason," fumed Mancuso. "There's no guarantee that a senior citizen would be able to find a parking place on Wall Street anyway. That argument was nothing more than a threat by the businessmen and there isn't a shred of reason to it."

Stampfle, however, disagrees. "A good deal of our business is done with older people," he said, "on-street parking for them is both a convenience and a necessity."

Stampfle also noted that a parking ban in the Pike Plan area could force shoppers to take their business elsewhere, particularly outside the city where parking is more plentiful. If that happens, he said, the city could stand to lose valuable sales tax revenues. Koenig said Monday that 20-minute parking meters would be installed at the 30 available spaces in the Pike Plan area along Wall and North Front streets. Stampfle said strict enforcement of the parking rules should alleviate the congestion because "police would have a tool with which to work."

Seek Abductor

By Matt Spireng

MOUNT PLEASANT

State police are seeking a man who abducted a 16-year-old girl at knife-point Monday afternoon from this western Ulster County community and drove her to Boiceville where he sexually assaulted her.

Investigators said the girl, who was not identified, had just gotten off a school bus at about 3:20 p.m. and was walking toward her home when her assailant pulled up next to her in a car, got out, and forced her into the vehicle at knife-point.

The man then drove along Route 28 toward Boiceville, where he pulled into a wooded area near the old Boiceville railroad station. The man then assaulted the girl, forcing her to commit sodomy, police said.

After the attack, the man drove the girl back to a point near her residence, where he dropped her off and then fled, said police.

Hurley State Police BCI investigators described the girl's assailant as a white male, age 20 to 25, about 5 feet 10, of medium to stocky build with a short black hair. He was wearing tinted glasses with wire rims, police said, and carried a hunting knife. The vehicle he was driving was described as a red Volkswagen "bug."

Authorities asked anyone with possible information about the girl's assailant, his car or the incident to contact Hurley State Police 338-1702. All information will be held in confidence, police said.

because it's not the problem. It won't be effective at all," said Mancuso. The Council's majority leader, and chairman of its traffic committee, said there is no reason to believe the uptown business district won't be as congested and as inaccessible as it is now.

Part of the problem all along has been the tendency of some businessmen, and their employees, to grab the few available parking spots on Wall and North streets when they come to work in the morning, and to leave their cars there all day long. The businessmen, apparently realizing that such a practice doesn't exactly promote good customer relations, have begun a campaign to persuade UBA members and their employees to refrain from parking in the Pike Plan area.

Mancuso, meanwhile, has disputed suggestions that a parking ban in the Pike Plan area would render obsolete 30 parking meters that were purchased specifically for that purpose. He pointed out Monday that extra meters were purchased last year because, at the time, they were relatively cheap, but that they weren't intended specifically for use in

Last Angolan Offensive?

LUSAKA, Zambia — Thousands of Cuban combat troops have overrun the pro-Western capital of Huambo and today pushed toward the vital supply base of Silva Porto in what could be the final offensive of the Angolan civil war.

The loss of Huambo Monday was the worst defeat by the pro-Western coalition in nine months of the war. Military experts in Lusaka said the allies could collapse within the next few days unless they receive massive supplies of sophisticated arms.

Lebanon Reforms Delayed

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Last-minute dickering among politicians today held up the announcement of political reforms deemed essential to stabilize Lebanon's 10-day-old cease-fire into permanent peace.

Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh conferred with his political advisers on the draft of a presidential announcement that would outline the reforms, agreed on by right-wing Christians and leftist Moslem factions.

Originally Franjeh had been expected to announce the "new deal" Wednesday after meeting with Premier Rashid Karami and his six-man cabinet.

Split in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel — Members of three political parties, including dissidents in Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor bloc, are considering replacing him with Defense Minister Shimon Peres, Israeli newspapers said today.

The Ma'ariv newspaper said the move was prompted by a feeling that a rift between Rabin and Peres was irreparable. However it said the friction so far posed no immediate threat to Rabin's leadership.

The split involved criticism by Rabin of a shopping list for U.S. weaponry prepared by the Defense Ministry.

Car Output Trimmed

DETROIT — The juggling that U.S. automakers have done with their production schedules to meet shifts in customer demand has trimmed about 10,000 cars from February's planned output.

The trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports also said Monday that combined car and truck production in this country in March will give the U.S. industry its first 1-million month since October of 1974. That includes 832,000 cars and 265,000 trucks.

Nancy Doing Fine

BOSTON — Nancy Kissinger continues to improve following surgery that removed 40 per cent of her stomach to relieve a chronic gastric ulcer.

Mrs. Kissinger was "up and around" and drinking liquids Monday, two days after the operation at Massachusetts General Hospital.

"Mrs. Kissinger is continuing to do well. She took her first liquid this morning, aside from water, and she's been up and around her room again today," Drs. George L. Nardi and W. Gerald Austin said in a statement.

Ford Signs Defense Bill

WASHINGTON — President Ford today signed a $112.3 billion defense appropriations bill, but denounced a provision halting U.S. aid to Angola and said he accepted the measure only because of importance of the programs it finances.

"I am deeply disappointed that the Congress has acted in this bill to deprive the people of Angola of the assistance needed to resist Soviet and Cuban military intervention in their country," Ford said in a statement.

Gallo, Mabie, Martens On Dem State Committee

STONE RIDGE
County Democrats, rallying behind Chairman Harold Brown's call for "unity," unanimously elected T. Robert Gallo, Roger Mabie and Frieda Martens to the State Committee, Monday night at a party convention on the Stone Ridge Campus of Ulster County Community College.

Kingston Alderman-at-Large Gallo was elected committeeman from the 101st Assembly District, succeeding Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey who did not seek reelection to the state committee.

Gallo, an elected city official in Kingston since 1963, was nominated by his long-time running mate, Mayor Francis R. Koenig. Gallo's nomination was seconded by Edward Crosby, Town of Ulster councilman.

Dr. Martens was nominated for re-election to the post she has held for the past 10 years by Agnes Loughran of Kingston. Frank C. Sass of Kingston seconded the nomination. Dr. Martens of Ruby is assistant dean at Dutchess County Community College.

Mabie of Esopus was nominated for re-election by former Esopus Supervisor George Freer. Mabie, a former Esopus supervisor, is serving his third term as state committeeman from the 99th Assembly District. His nomination was seconded by Salvatore Crimi of Lloyd.

Considering there was no opposition to any of the candidates, "the turnout was about as good as we normally get," according to Vice Chairman Rose Hogan of Kingston. The Democrats elected delegates to last night's convention, three from each of the 250 election districts in Ulster County. About half were in attendance.

Assembly Hinchey was expected to nominate Gallo but was detained in Albany by legislative business.

the uptown business area. "We wouldn't be wasting the cost of 30 meters by implementing the parking ban," said Mancuso. "They can be installed in other areas whenever and wherever they are needed."

Despite the mayor's promise of a veto, the council still may have the last word. Mancuso said nine council votes are needed to override the mayor's veto (the parking ban legislation was passed by a 9-3 vote). "Can we override the veto? I don't know," said Mancuso, "all I can do is put my faith in the individuality of each of our aldermen . . . I'm not going to cater to a few individuals, and I hope my colleagues won't either."

Flood Control

TOWN OF ULSTER
Members of the reactivated Lower Esopus Waterway Committee have begun a petition drive in order to enlist public support for a flood control project to be included in the Army Corps of Engineers regional flood plan.

The campaign was launched Monday night at a meeting of about 40 Lake Katrine residents who were victims of the recent flood which caused many to evacuate their homes.

They feel that a little foresight on the part of the corps could have substantially reduced the damage that raging flood waters inflicted on town properties two weeks ago.

The committee wants the corps to protect the town side of the Esopus Creek where a $2 million flood control project is planned to protect the City of Kingston. Plans call for the construction of a dike on the city side of the creek between Col. Chandler Drive and Washington Avenue.

Ulster County Legislator Richard D. Nace (R-Dist. 5) who initiated the meeting called for substantial pressure on federal, state and county officials to include the Town of Ulster in their project considerations.

Nace claims the present plans would protect only the Kingston Plaza and Dutch Village Apartments and that the committee will possibly seek an injunction to stop the project unless an assessment is made of the needs of "all the people along the creek."

American banking really began back in 1791...

Before the Revolution, there was not a single bank in the thirteen colonies. In 1791, Alexander Hamilton, our first Secretary of the Treasury, proposed the establishment of a National Bank for the United States. There was some opposition to the plan. Thomas Jefferson and some others held that the Constitution made no provision for the chartering of banks. Nevertheless, Hamilton persuaded Washington to sign the bill and the Bank of the United States came into being. Within a year, the Bank's 6% bonds were selling abroad at well above par.

Twenty years later, along came Andrew Jackson. He was not our most sophisticated President. He hated "folding money", trusted only metallic coinage, and was, he said, afraid of banks. He managed to prevent the re-chartering of the Bank of the United States. Private banks took over the banking functions while Government gradually assumed a regulatory role, establishing such entities as the Federal Reserve to back up the banking system, and the FDIC to protect bank depositors.

Today, as a member of FDIC, Rondout Savings guarantees the safety of its depositor's money. As a local bank, managed and directed by local people, Rondout Savings serves the local community in many ways — and has done so for the past 108 years.

Patty Hearst: Fear and Abuse

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In a quiet, emotionless voice, Patricia Hearst finally told her story of life underground with the Symbionese Liberation Army — a life of fear, sexual assault and physical abuse.

The 21-year-old newspaper heiress admitted Monday she helped rob a bank, fired a machine gun at a Los Angeles sporting goods store, helped kidnap a high school student and trekked back and forth across the country with radicals without trying to escape.

She said she took part in the bank robbery and did whatever else she was told after being threatened with death "hundreds of times."

She said she was locked in dark closets for several weeks after her kidnaping, raped in one of them by William Wolfe and other SLA members, hauled from one hideout to another in a garbage can carried in a car trunk, and punched in the eye four times by William Harris.

Fear that either the SLA or FBI would kill her — especially after she watched six of her kidnapers slain in a battle with Los Angeles police on television — kept her from taking advantage of repeated chances to escape, Miss Hearst said.

Although she covered most of her life underground, she was instructed by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey not to respond to questions from Prosecutor James Browning Jr. about the planning of a bank holdup last April in Carmichael, Calif., where a woman was killed. Bailey told her to decline on grounds of possible self-incrimination.

Miss Hearst made the first public disclosures about her life in captivity at a hearing on the admissibility of her bank robbery trial of evidence about events in the April 15, 1974, holdup.

The jury, absent from the courtroom during Miss Hearst's appearance, was excused again today as U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter continued the hearing.

The granddaughter of newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst renounced her SLA comrades and denied ever being emotionally involved with William Wolfe, whom she described in a tape made after his death as "the gentlest, most beautiful man I've ever known" and as someone she "loved so much" because of his commitment to revolutionary goals.

Miss Hearst said her eulogy to Wolfe and five other SLA members killed in the Los Angeles battle was written by Emily Harris and that she was forced to read it.

She said SLA member Angela Atwood wrote the script for an April 18, 1974, tape in which Miss Hearst said she voluntarily took part in the bank holdup as "a soldier in the people's army" and insisted she hadn't been brainwashed.

"Now there are statements on the tape ... indicating that you acted voluntarily when you went to the Hibernia Bank. Was that true? Did you, in fact, act voluntarily?" Bailey asked.

"No," she replied.

Aging Proposals Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's request to Congress for election-year increases in Social Security taxes and a boost in the Medicare costs paid by elderly and disabled Americans was under attack before it left his desk.

In his first special message to Congress this year, Ford said Monday his Medicare plan would protect the aged and disabled under Medicare against "catastrophic" medical costs, and the Social Security tax rise would protect the system's financial status.

While Ford was making his appeal at a ceremony in the White House Oval Office, the previously unveiled Medicare plan was being attacked at a House Ways and Means sub-committee hearing which continues today. "It appears to us as an obvious political maneuver to win favor with the high income elderly in presidential primaries at the expense of the nation's elderly poor and sick," said Bert Seidman, director of the AFL-CIO Social Security department.

Ford said his proposals are aimed at "helping all Americans to live in dignity, security and good health."

The Social Security proposal also drew sharp criticism from some congressional Democrats after it was proposed by Ford in his State of the Union and budget messages.

It would increase payroll taxes by three-tenths of one per cent each for workers and their bosses to shore up the system's dwindling reserves, estimated by some experts to be in danger of running out by 1980.

Gonzo Bonzo And Campaign '76

DURHAM, N.H. (UPI) — Bonzo the Chimpanzee has swung back out of Hollywood history to haunt Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary. The beast gives President Ford equal time.

Reagan made a movie called "Bedtime for Bonzo" two decades ago, a comedy about raising a chimp as a child. One of the activists in the People's Bicentennial Commission, a small but noisy band whose counter-celebration includes damning big business and harrasing primary candidates, has taken to wearing a hairy Bonzo costume to primary rallies.

The primary primate made his debut at a Reagan appearance at Dartmouth University last week, but the candidate managed to remain the event's top banana. Sunday, at a University of New Hampshire appearance in front of 3,500 students, Ford found one of the questioners at the audience microphone was Bonzo.

Gonzo Bonzo beat his chest over a question condemning big business. Ford, like Reagan, apparently decided the only thing to do with a chimp in the crowd was to pretend chimps are people.

Ford simply remarked he could not understand one of Bonzo's words, got Bonzo to repeat it, and answered the question.

Monday, trailing Ford to the university campus, Reagan visited the Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. Reagan was a Teke at Eureka College, Ill. four decades ago.

Come on, fellows, said Reagan, why did the students show "Bedtime for Bonzo" on campus this week? His fraternity brothers laughed.

The former movie star said the movie was a "good comedy" when made, but asked, "Is it still funny?" Because you're in it, a Teke brother said.

Reagan laughed. One of the brothers added: "And you know, governor, we've got a number of chimps in this fraternity house too."

"You know, it was tragic about old Bonzo," Reagan said. "The night before he was to have collected his animal Oscar he burned to death in a fire at Jungleland."

Rich Get Still Richer on 'Incestuous' Campaign Financing

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Among the 90-odd men and women who formally have registered with the Federal Election Commission as 1976 presidential candidates are a few names you'd recognize — Ford, Wallace, Reagan — and many you wouldn't recognize — Lanyhow, Zeidler and Silverstein, for instance.

In the whole bag, my favorite candidate is Sam Silverstein of Conshohocken, Pa. Sam's platform is built of planks such as these:

"Take all congressman off salary and put them on a straight commission.

"Require all doctors to publish their medical school grades in the telephone book.

"Issue postage stamps with nude photos of famous Americans to keep the Post Office out of debt."

Silverstein has a sense of humor and therefore can't be considered seriously as a presidential candidate. But, even if Sam takes himself seriously, he doesn't have a chance because Sam is poor and has no rich friends. Sam Silverstein is a sheet metal worker, presently unemployed.

Consider now presidential candidate Ellen McCormack, a Long Island housewife. There's nothing funny about her one-plank platform. She's against abortion. She's also a Roman Catholic.

You've probably never heard of Ellen McCormack either. But she has the support of certain Catholic organizations. She has friends who already have contributed $135,000 to her campaign. She therefore qualifies for federal matching funds to subsidize her campaign.

Ellen McCormack thus joins Ford, Wallace, Reagan and a handful of other presidential candidates who have demonstrated that they have enough friends and money to qualify for federal funds. The Federal Election Commission already has handed out $7 million of taxpayers' money to about 15 candidates — all the political pros you've heard of plus Ellen McCormack, whom you will hear of.

Meanwhile, Sam Silverstein and the other 75-odd registered candidates get no subsidies because they don't have enough friends and money. The catch is that before a candidate qualifies he or she must collect $100,000 from at least 400 friends.

Such is the net result of political financing "reform" that Congress began in the shadow of Watergate scandals and that the Supreme Court now has finished.

The Supreme Court upheld some of Congress' "reforms" and threw out others, but the net result is that the political pros and other candidates with rich friends are better off than ever.

The rich get richer, the poor get poorer. Or, as Chief Justice Warren Burger said in his dissenting opinion: "The system of 'matching funds' which makes a candidate's ability to amass private funds the sole criterion for eligibility for public funds... can put at serious disadvantage a candidate with a potentially large, widely diffused — but poor — constituency."

The "reforms" do violence to poor candidates and to third parties. The Republican and Democratic Parties and their candidates each will collect $22 million from taxpayers in 1976. If any other party qualifies for subsidies, which is doubtful, it can't collect until after the presidential election.

The rich get still richer, the poor still poorer. Or, as Justice William Rehnquist wrote in dissent, "Congress has enshrined the Republican and Democratic Parties in a permanently preferred position."

Taxpayer financing of political campaigns has been called incestuous because the parties in control of government are using federal funds to perpetuate their control. But public financing of political campaigns is even more insidiously incestuous.

Ellen McCormack and other candidates are entitled to their abortion opinions. But the Catholic Church also is against abortion and the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights strongly defends Ellen McCormack's candidacy.

She will not be elected President, but her candidacy already exerts pressures on other candidates, one of whom will be elected President. Taxpayer financing of Ellen McCormack's candidacy therefore raises grave constitutional questions concerning the separation of church and state.

Naval Power Slipping

TOKYO (UPI) — America's top admiral has made headlines in the Far East by telling the House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee that the U.S. Navy has lost control of the Sea of Japan.

According to Adm. James L. Holloway, chief of naval operations, the new top dog in the waters that separate Japan from Korea and Siberia now is the Soviet navy.

"I'd say that today, any operations we would want to conduct in the Sea of Japan would be at the sufferance of the Soviet Union," Holloway testified.

The United States won undisputed control of the Western Pacific and Sea of Japan by smashing the Japanese navy in World War II.

In the past 10 years, however, American naval supremacy in the Pacific and elsewhere has been challenged by a growing Soviet navy buildup.

Such authorities as "Jane's Fighting Ships" and Britain's Institute of Strategic Studies have pointed to the possibility of America dropping back to become the world's No. 2 naval power.

In October, a Tokyo newspaper reported Japan's Self-Defense Agency was concerned over the growing Soviet naval might.

The Tokyo Shimbun quoted Japanese defense sources as guessing Soviet naval strength in the Pacific at 755 vessels of about 1.2 million tons combined weight.

American strength was estimated at 60 ships of all kinds weighing in at around 740,000 tons.

The U.S. Seventh (Far East) Fleet, which Holloway formerly commanded, deployed three aircraft carriers to none for the Soviets.

However, the Russians were said to have 30 nuclear powered submarines in the Pacific compared to five for the United States.

Both Japan and South Korea are America's military allies. Some 38,000 American troops are stationed in South Korea. Another 55,000 are based in Japan, including Okinawa.

The shock effect of Holloway's words was greatest in South Korea. In effect, he warned that if the unsettled 1950-53 Korean war broke out again, the sea approaches to South Korea might be dominated by the Soviet Union, an ally of North Korea.

In Tokyo, the Asahi newspaper quoted Japanese defense sources as saying the Sea of Japan "is regularly used by the Soviets as a practice sea."

"Soviet warships pass through the Tsushima and Tsugaru Straits (the Japan Sea's main entrances) all the time," the newspaper said. "In contrast, the U.S. Seventh Fleet held maneuvers in the Sea of Japan only once in 1975."

The Japanese also looked for more requests from Washington to build up their own modest naval strength. Rep. Robert Wilson (R-Calif.), No. 2 man on the House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee, asked aloud if the time had come for America to "put pressure on Japan to build up her navy and take over the job of guaranteeing her own sea lanes."

Differing Interpretations of the Campaign Finance Law

Author's Note: The Democratic and Republican National Committees are going their separate ways in interpreting the campaign finance laws.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (KFS) — The Republican National Committee and the Democratic National Committee have been interpreting the campaign contribution restrictions just upheld by the Supreme Court in dramatically different ways.

The result is that while both are officially neutral in their party's contest for the presidential nomination, the Democratic party has been far more helpful to its candidates than has the Republican party.

The Republicans have a stickier internal problem than do the Democrats, since one of the candidates happens to be the incumbent President. The National Committee has reacted publicly by offering all its services equally, including its fund-raising lists, to both candidates — for a price.

Cost of Services

The Republicans asked the Federal Election Commission whether the committee's services could be considered "contributions in kind" and therefore fall within the $5,000 donation to which such bodies are limited per candidate. The FEC did not issue an advisory opinion, but did reply informally that such services were indeed included.

On that basis, the GOP decided that it would charge for any services it provided either the President or former Gov. Ronald Reagan, and that it would print nothing but hard news about both candidates in its regular publication, "First Monday," lest any puffery also be considered a "contribution in kind."

This strict attitude, Reagan advisers complain, is merely a means of denying Reagan technical help that would mean more to him than it does to the President, who has a whole White House support system at his disposal. Consequently, relations between the Republican National Committee and the Reagan camp are very strained. Reagan has shown no interest in buying the RNC's fund-raising letter.

The President has not yet paid for any RNC services either, although a spokesman for his campaign said there had been discussions about how to set a fair market value.

The Democratic National Committee, on the other hand, has been providing all sorts of information and services to any Democratic candidate who asked for them, free of charge. All the candidates have asked for, and received, the committee's basic fund-raising list as well as its contributor list from the yearly telethons. In addition, the DNC has supplied without cost delegate selection information, demographic research data, target media lists and polling information.

The DNC has never asked the Federal Election Commission for advice and merely adopted the attitude on its own that its services were noncommercial and of unascertainable value and therefore not "contributions in kind."

Typical of Confusion

This difference in interpretation of the law between the Republicans and Democrats is typical of the confusion that has surrounded the complicated reforms enacted by Congress in 1974.

"As a general rule, any services rendered by the national committees are contributions in kind and fall within the limitations. A mailing list, for instance, is valuable help to a candidate's fund-raising," said David Fisk, an FEC spokesman.

"Absurd," replied Mark Segal, DNC executive director. "The campaign law is meant to address the inequities of Watergate, not control our Xerox machine. We aren't commercial and we aren't making contributions by performing normal party functions, so long as we perform them for everyone equally, which we are doing."

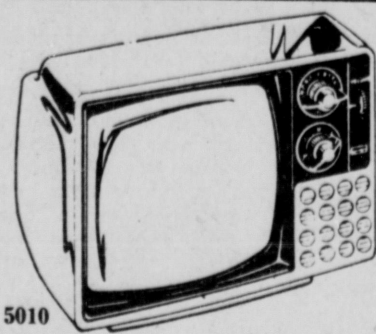

In reality, there does not appear to be very much the FEC can do about the problem of party services in any event. It only has the power to write a letter and ask for voluntary compliance, if it should go ahead and issue a formal opinion. And if Congress does not pass legislation meeting the Supreme Court's objections to the commission, it will be stripped of even that minor authority in 30 days.

Irony Primary Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Irony is no stranger to politics, but it is hard to recall a more striking series of bittersweet coincidences than are coming together this year in Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin Democratic party is one of the most militantly reformist state political organizations in the country. At recent Democratic national conventions, the Wisconsin delegates have been in the forefront of efforts to strengthen party rules designed to open its ranks to all comers and have supported efforts to enforce reforms once they are enacted.

Now it is the Wisconsin Democratic party that is feeling the pinch of reform. One of the rules adopted by the national party in 1974 to govern the selection of convention delegates requires that the process be limited to Democrats. Wisconsin has no party registration and prides itself in an "open" primary system that lets Democrats vote in Republican primaries, or vice versa, without restraint.

The national party commission charged with enforcing the new rules found that Wisconsin's presidential primary, to be held on April 6 this year, does not meet the requirement of "Democrats only" in delegate selection. It said the Wisconsin Democrats, who control both houses of the state legislature, either had to change the primary or design a new delegate selection system.

Therein is the second irony. Up to the start of its current session, the legislature has refused to touch the wide open Wisconsin primary law, leaving the party with the option of using a caucus and convention procedure for choosing delegates.

But it was the caucus system — in practice, party meetings usually attended by only a few persons — that Wisconsin dumped 71 years ago when it became the first state in the nation to adopt the "reform" presidential primary for selecting national convention delegates.

That isn't all. The reason the national party objects to the wide open Wisconsin primary is that Republicans, independents and other non-believers can use it to distort the will of the Democratic rank and file.

It is an open secret in the state that "cross over" voting has been used many times by members of one party to support the weakest candidate of the opposition in hopes of making general election victory easier.

But this year, after a long series of no contests and hohum GOP presidential primaries that invited party members to cross over to the Democratic primary to make mischief, there is a real battle on the Republican side. And, with the Democratic primary apparently to be relegated to beauty contest status, the temptation in 1976 will be for the Democrats to vote in the Ford-Reagan confrontation.

Congratulations Mayor

Mayor Francis R. Koenig has revealed his intention to veto the recent Common Council legislation banning parking in the Pike Plan area . . . and the Freeman congratulates him for it.

We fully realize that there are parking problems in that area, as well as throughout the city. We have presented stories, photos and editorials on this subject many times. We would hope that the problem can be resolved once cooler heads prevail.

Certainly there are parking privileges in that area that are constantly abused. And, some of the merchants who complained loudly and bitterly about the recent legislation are reported to be the worst offenders.

However, this legislation would have been of great detriment to the merchants and shoppers who treat the Pike Plan with the utmost respect. After all, it only takes one or two mis-parked cars to foul an entire line of law-biding traffic.

It would be nice though, if the City could find some way of making a mall of the Pike Plan. It would take a lot of work and organization, but, if it were possible and practical, the uptown shopping area would easily become a showplace of the Mid-Hudson Valley.

Front Page Story

Dear Editor,

Congratulations on your front-page story about the three engineering officials of General Electric who quit their jobs because they believed that nuclear energy is a profound threat to man.

For more than two and a half years, increasing numbers of individuals and groups in the Hudson Valley have issued similar warnings about the hazards of this technology. Many times, in confrontations with individuals and groups which supported atomic energy, we have been called "uninformed", "emotional", and "alarmists", despite the numerous scientists whom we quoted in defense of our position. We of the Hudson Valley Citizens Watch on Nuclear Safety are particularly pleased, therefore, to have our worst fears vindicated in public by still more experts.

It is most significant that, in addition to having among them a total of 54 years of experience in the nuclear field, these men with families to support believe the danger inherent in nuclear technology is so great that they voluntarily gave up substantial yearly salaries and forfeited any future possibility of ever again working in a profession to which they had devoted their adult lives and abilities.

We believe the words of men of such rare integrity must be carefully studied by every resident of the Hudson Valley in view of PASNY's plans to site an atomic facility at Cementon and of the proposed siting of four nuclear plants at Lloyd-Esopus, in addition to the three reactors already located at Indian Point (most if not all of their electricity destined for New York City's subways and skyscrapers). If they are convinced by these words, we hope that every citizen, every Town Board, every valley County Legislature will make known to Governor Carey, to PASNY, and to the Public Service Commission their objections to the use of the Hudson area as a nuclear super-highway.

Yours truly,
Ned Lebac
Secretary
New Paltz

Dedicated Workers

Dear Editor:

I am sure that some of your readers are familiar with the dedicated work of the volunteer fire departments in the Hudson Valley. But for those who are not, perhaps this letter will serve a useful purpose.

I live in the Blue Mountain Park area of Saugerties and, of course, can speak only first hand of the work of the Center-ville Fire Department, which serves this area.

During the last week of January when the deluge came following the January thaw, these men did an incredible job. For most of the week these firemen, all neighbors, spent the major portion of their time away from the regular work bailing out people with serious and sometimes dangerous flooding problems in their homes.

In my particular case, no less than five visits were made, visits which sometimes lasted from four to eight hours. How they were able to spend all night bailing out a neighbor's cellar or crawl space in miserably freezing temperatures and then put in a full day's work on their regular jobs I do not know. I do know that many of them must have seen their wives and families very little for that extended period.

Perhaps the most impressive thing to me, besides their selfless dedication, was their genuine concern with finding the structural cause of the flooding and their willingness to go not just an extra mile to correct it but quite a few beyond that. I know that I and my family are deeply indebted to Chief Warren Benz, Captain Roger Brayley, Fireman Jim Taylor, Allan Proper, Bob Kleeman, and Assistant Chief Phil Dugan. And there were others whose names I regret I did not get.

They were all simply great. I wouldn't have believed such a generosity of time and spirit was possible in this day and age if I hadn't seen it . . . and I SAW it. I just couldn't have begun to pay anyone for the hours spent and the expertise they brought to the job.

It has been proved to me that our volunteer firemen are undoubtedly one of the finest human resources we have in the Hudson Valley.

Most sincerely,
JAMES F. MCCONNOCHIE
SAUGERTIES

No Bearing

Dear Editor,

Thanks for space in the paper to address one, Mr. James Thomas who rebutted me and challenged me for an answer to my articles, "Stiff Sentence for Drugs" on Jan. 27, 1976.

Dear Mr. James Thomas,

Your rebuttal with reference to my article in the Kingston Freeman was categorically your right of free speech, but three words that you used were impertinent, improper, insulting, unethical and sarcastic and in bad taste and had no bearing on the subject matter—as—hypocrite, fool and teetotaler.

Rather than being verbose at present, I am urging you to fortify yourself with the facts as to the impact—psychological and physiological use of Marijuana, and other drugs.

New School Out

Dear Editor,

Would you be kind enough to publish this in the editorial column?

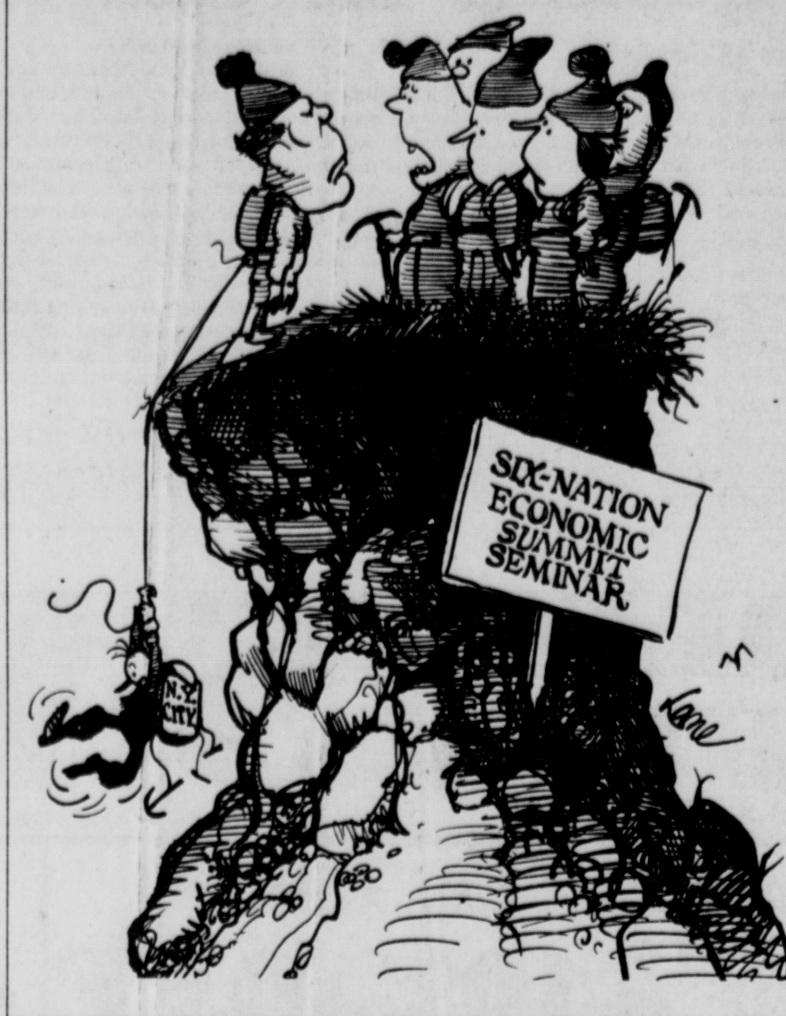

The taxpayers cannot afford a new high school. It's as simple as that. At a time when the economy is at an all time low plus the drastic cuts in state aid to education, the beleaguered taxpayers are in desperation. Furthermore a good education is not dependent on fancy surroundings. Abraham Lincoln is a classic example of that.

So let's stop making waves and instead make plans to accept the best alternatives. Many of the same people who are pushing so hard for a new high school will not be around to pay for it. We natives will.

Our sincere admiration goes to school board member, Mr. Richard Skala for having the courage of his convictions and honoring his promises to the taxpayers.

Sincerely,
M. VAN ETEN

'A Column By Me'

Occasionally a newspaper carrying my words will mistakenly ascribe them to Mr. Art Buchwald, even furnishing a picture of him (most recently this brought from Buchwald a note, "Bill: how do you manage to stay so young?"). I wish to record that what follows is not a column by Art Buchwald. It is a column by me, WFB, and it features a communication by the Attorney General of the State of Wisconsin. So far as I know, it is not a hoax. The communication is entitled, "Employment Application Form Questions Which May Lead to Discrimination."

The communication is designed for employers in Wisconsin who desire not to break the law, especially Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which some of us will remember as the law Senator Barry Goldwater voted against on the grounds that it was unconstitutional. Perhaps it isn't unconstitutional, but it is certainly a lot of other things.

The Attorney General's office wishes every Wisconsinite to know that "When he inquires into any of (the enumerated) factors"—i.e., in interviewing or soliciting information from a prospective employee—"he is running a risk of encouraging unlawful discrimination." This is so even when you don't act on the information—the mere asking of the questions might tend "to discourage women or minorities from even applying for jobs."

Here's a list of what you can't ask.

1. "Age? Date of birth?" You might find yourself violating the laws that prohibit age discrimination.

2. "Arrest?" Absolutely not. An arrest is no indication "whatsoever" of guilt, and "historically minorities have suffered proportionately more arrests than others."

3. "Available for Saturday and Sunday work?" No. You see, some people "belong to religious sects that prohibit work on Saturday or Sunday." For some reason, the Attorney General appears to show no concern for people who belong to religious sects that prohibit work on Wednesdays; or, for that matter, to sects that discourage any work at all.

4. "Children under 18? Number of children? Age of children? What arrangements will you make for care of minor children?" No sirree. "The purpose of these questions is to explore what the employer believes to be a common source of absenteeism and tardiness. But why explore this area in such an indirect way, and in a way which applies only to women for all practical purposes?" The Civil Rights Act of 1964 forgot to make men mothers.

6. "Convictions?" "Probably unlawful. See Carter v. Gallagher, 451 F 2d 315 (8th Cir. 1971). This is because some minority groups in our society have conviction records substantially in excess of the average . . ."

7. "Credit Record? (Charge account? Own your own home? Own your own furniture? Own a car?)" No. "Because minority persons are far poorer on the average than whites, consideration of these factors has an adverse effect . . ."

8. "Eyes? Hair?" "Eye color and hair color are not related to the performance of any job and may serve to indicate an employee's race or religion." What if you want a natural blonde to advertise a lipstick that goes with natural blonde hair?

10. "Friends or relatives working for us?" No. You may have a disproportionate number of non-female non-minority friends.

11. "Garnishment record?" " . . . minorities suffer wage garnishment substantially more often than do whites."

12. "Height? Weight?" No. Such questions might have "the effect of excluding above-average percentages of women and members of certain nationality groups." Milesians and Hottentots, one supposes.

Numbers 14-18 are anti-sexist, proscribing, "maiden name?" "Marital status?" "Mr., Miss, or Mrs.?" (" . . . simply another way of asking the applicant's sex. . .")

The list closes with 21, "widowed, divorced or separated?" "Recent statistics show that many more black than white persons are either widowed, divorced or separated. . ."

What I would like to do, if I lived in Wisconsin, is file a citizen's suit against the Attorney General for sponsoring a document that is itself sexist and racist in its implications. I would have him tried and convicted, and sentenced to eat his communication, all six pages of it, in public. One wonders what questions one would be permitted to ask a prospective juror at the Attorney General's trial. If you asked, "Are you bright?" and the answer was affirmative, then clearly the AG would not be tried by a jury of his peers.

Richardson Makes Big News

WASHINGTON — The big news in Washington last week was not that Daniel Patrick Moynihan resigned, but that Elliot Richardson decided to stay on as secretary of commerce for the rest of the month of February.

As everyone knows, Mr. Richardson has not remained at one position in the government for too long. He has been secretary of health, education and welfare, secretary of defense, attorney general, ambassador to the Court of St. James and was sworn in last week as secretary of commerce.

While most people send the President a letter when they resign and receive a letter from the President regretting their departure, Mr. Richardson turned the tables and wrote the President saying he planned to remain at his post.

Here is the exchange of letters between the President and Secretary Richardson.

"Dear Mr. President: I am happy to tell you that after a week as secretary of commerce I intend to stay. My reasons for this decision are personal. I need the job.

"You have always treated me fairly and supported me during these trying days when the Commerce Department has been under fire from all sides. I hope you are satisfied with the job I did during the last week and the decisions I made over the weekend. It has been a pleasure working in your Administration and with you personally.

"While my reasons for staying on are my own, I will be frank and say that I discussed them with my wife. She thought I might do some good in the private sector but urged me to stay on in my present position because of the security involved. My children also played a part in the decision. Every time they went to school and someone asked them what their father did for a living, they said they couldn't remember.

"I have assured them that, at least until the election, they could say I was secretary of commerce. So, as you can see, my decision to remain in your Cabinet has

Pilfered Pennies Case

WASHINGTON — The strange case of the pilfered pennies helped to send earnest Mary Brooks, the harassed director of the U.S. Mint, to the hospital last November with nervous exhaustion. She is still quietly recuperating.

Many pressures contributed to the strain that has kept her away from her office for more than three months. But the incident that upset her the most, according to friends, was the mysterious disappearance of a dozen aluminum pennies on Capitol Hill.

The experimental coins were delivered to the Senate and House banking committees for the members to inspect. That's the last the authorities saw of most of the pennies, which are worth thousands of dollars apiece to anyone brash enough to risk federal prosecution. Within a few years, their individual value may be as high as $100,000.

Poor Ms. Brooks was responsible for the rare coins. She had to get them back or report them stolen. But it would have been awkward for her to accuse Members of Congress of theft. She would have been obliged to investigate the very committee members who oversee the U.S. Mint.

We published the story of the missing coins on April 21. This put Ms. Brooks on the spot, but she was unable to solve the disappearance. Meanwhile, the lightfingered legislators still haven't returned the valuable coins.

The embattled Mint director arranged for hospitalization last November and disappeared as quietly as the pennies. Her friends say she hopes to be back in her office in a few days on a limited basis.

Another problem that weighed heavily upon her was a monumental coinage study, which may result in dollar coins, two-cent pieces and other new mintings.

She had argued that two-cent pieces would stop vending machine operators from escalating prices five cents at a time. The dollar coins not only have become realistic as they diminish in value, but they will far outlast paper currency, she contended.

All a spokesman at the Mint would say was that he expected the boss back in the office "in a short time."

Footnote: In an earlier column, we reported that Ms. Brooks had tried to block the minting of 65,000 experimental aluminum pennies. This was disputed by Coin World, the coin collectors' bible.

We not only have secret Mint documents which back up our story, but we spoke personally to Ms. Brooks who confirmed that the minting had been carried out by her aides without her knowledge. Apparently someone slipped Coin World a wooden nickel.

KENNEDY'S COOL: Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., keeping cool in a crisis, recently saved a young woman from possible decapitation.

It happened on January 22. Carol Chealander, a professional staffer for the Senate Republican Policy Committee, stepped into a crowded elevator on Capitol Hill.

Before the pretty, 26-year-old brunette could get all the way inside, the powerful doors closed around her neck.

The elevator operator froze. The passengers, aghast, stood by helplessly — with one exception. Senator Kennedy looked up from his reading and calmly told the elevator operator: "Let go of the handle."

But the panicked operator didn't relax his grip even after Kennedy repeated the injunction. All the while, the continuing pressure from the doors was slowly crushing Ms. Chealander's neck.

Then Kennedy pushed through the crowded elevator and knocked the operator's hand off the control. The elevator doors sprang open, and Ms. Chealander stumbled inside. "If Senator Kennedy hadn't kept his head," she told us, "I'd be dead."

As it is, she has been out of work with major neck injuries since the accident. Kennedy helped her find medical care, incidentally, referring her to the same physician who had treated his brothers and himself for injuries.

The Senator has avoided publicizing his good deed in a manner uncommon to politics. When we called his office to ask about the incident, aides confirmed the report but told us: "The Senator doesn't think it is appropriate to comment on it."

MEAT STEW: Not all bureaucrats learned the lessons of Watergate. When a federal takeover of meat inspection programs loomed, New York state meat inspections director L.R. Crowell had this advice for his staff in a private memo:

"Upon receipt of this memo, please start destroying regional files...anything of a confidential nature should first be torn up." He ordered destruction of all "investigative materials" and "quarantine herd and flock files. Do not turn any regional files over to the USDA (U.S. Department of Agriculture)", he warned.

Reached for comment, Crowell said the files were legally destroyed and the USDA didn't want them anyway. "What is this, a cross examination?" he asked.

Kingston Had a Ball!

The Kingston Hospital Auxiliary painted the town red, white, and blue this past Saturday when the strains of Charlie Lee's orchestra played for the annual dance.

The ballroom of the Governor Clinton Hotel was transformed by the genius of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Seeger and their committee. Bunting and eagles, flags, and a star spangled musical score of the opening bars of "America, the Beautiful," the theme of the gala, there was a miniature construction of the Grand Canyon, and chandeliers honored our conquest of space.

On Monday morning, all those who had attended smiled, misty-eyed, and agreed, "It was a lovely affair."

Peter Kramer of Malden-on-Hudson danced away with the door prize: a bicentennial weekend trip for two, donated by Kingston Travel Agency.

Mrs. Thomas Buckley, dance chairman, thanked the community for their excellent support of the benefit.

stead farm which later became the Wiltwyck Country Club. Mr. Steward served as Sexton for the Old Dutch Church, and worked as Maintenance Supervisor at Britts until his retirement in 1971. The couple have been blessed with seven grandchildren.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, 72, Talks of Then and Now

By Marian Christy

WASHINGTON "Don't let the coffee get cold," chides Majority Leader of the Senate, Mike Mansfield of Montana, who offers a plate of home-made cookies before dashing off for a roll call.

Energetic Mansfield is the son of an Irish immigrant who worked as a hotel porter in New York. Today, at 72, he is a long-time political personality with a prominence for conspicuous humility.

His simply stated homespun philosophy pares down the art of living to its basic components:

"The older you get," he says, "the more you realize that you're a transient being, just passing through. Somehow, when you become the benefactor of good things, you go your way thanking God for his cordialities."

Sen. Mansfield, a tall man in an elegant navy blue suit, once worked in the copper mines of Butte. At that time he had only an eighth-grade education, had lied about his age (14) to serve in the armed forces of World War I, and had lived a poverty-stricken life based on no indoor plumbing and a once-a-week bath.

At various times during his 33 years in Congress, Mansfield has been urged to run for President. He's come a long way.

About the job he has shunned:

"As a senator," he says, "you have no time for a personal life. Actually, it's remarkable to sit down and consider that you've lived a political life all these years and you've got family that can still stand up after all the time you just weren't around. The presidency would rob your freedom altogether."

On the acquisition of superpower:

"Power is an illusion. Those who think of themselves as powerful people are probably on the decline. Long ago, I learned that it's the job that's important — not the man. Everything in life is temporary."

Sen. Mansfield, a soft-spoken gentleman who reminisces about his rags-to-riches-and-power rise, says his career is based primarily on the nebulous element of "luck."

He says: "In politics, you don't get by on your smile, your education, your charm or your fine clothes. What gets you through are the important, long-standing relationships you develop with your constituency. Really, I've been terribly lucky. I know a large slice of the 700,000 people I serve in Montana — and they know me.

"There's a friendship between us. Right now, as always, there are people in Montana who are smarter and maybe more efficient than me. But destiny, fate, Lady Luck — however you label that force — has created just the right combination to make my career happen."

The Mike Mansfields have been married for 44 years. When the senator speaks to his wife, Maureen, his eyes glow. A string of superlatives spills into the conversation: "She's the most remarkable... She's the most loving... She's the most supportive... She's the most brilliant..."

Mike and Maureen — sometimes called "the M-M's" by friends because of the ripe candy-sweetness they exude for each other — met through Maureen's older sister who was a student at the University of Montana when the senator was studying there.

"I didn't attend high school," says the senator. "But I was a veteran so the school made concessions to accept me as a campus dweller. Well, one day Maureen came on campus with her sister. We met. She sized me up. For both of us, it was love at first sight."

When Sen. Mansfield was in his senior year, the Mansfields got married. He had a job offer but, at the last minute, it "fell through." Maureen cashed in her life insurance so that he could have enough tuition money to finish college.

"Jobs were scarce then," he says. "But, then, a buck was worth a good deal more than it is today. In desperation, I went to my school advisor. He said the best he could do was to get me a job teaching social sciences for $1,400 a year," says Mansfield, who eventually became a professor of Far Eastern Studies at the university.

In 1940, at Maureen's urging, he ran for Congress and was defeated. It was Maureen, with her unfaltering faith in his potential, who gave him the "courage and spiritual stamina" to try again. In 1942 he ran — and won.

On confidence — which he exudes:

"Well, frankly, deep inside I don't feel all that confident. I think all people are basically insecure. You're never sure that the decisions you make are the right ones. But, in your mind and heart, you have to believe the moves you make are right."

"On the other hand, if you're really confident, you don't hesitate to consider the opinion of the person at the opposite pole. Once you come to grips with the fact that you're merely a human and therefore subject to error of judgment — your confidence is strengthened."

More on confidence: "It's really at a peak when you move within the framework of your limitations. In the final analysis, confidence is knowing what you're not — not only what you are."

Sen. Mansfield, the man who helped initiate the Watergate investigation and led the successful fight for the 18 year olds' vote, has known several presidents well.

About President Gerald Ford: "Well, frankly, he's too quick with the vetoes. I think he travels around the country too much and obviously he has been in dangerous situations. "But he's an open man, candid, conservative and pleasant. At least you know where the moves you make are with him. That's refreshing."

On former President Richard Nixon: "We used to have breakfast together once or twice a month. Actually, we were both insecure about each other. We never seemed to talk about matter of substance. We had a good 'relationship' — not a close one."

The senator, who is said to have no known political enemies in Washington, says the dwindling links with presidents are "somewhat" his fault. "I'm not much of a telephone person," he admits. "And actually, when you're a senator, the job comes before all else — even friendships."

When he recapitulates his career, does he have regrets that he has had little time to develop friendships of depth. Mansfield says his most poignant remorse concerns his London-based daughter, Anne Marris, 36, who's married to a professor at Cambridge University.

"Anne is my only child. She has always been very loving to me. I'm just so sorry that we didn't have one or two more children to keep her company. Anne has never been interested in running in a political race. We used to talk about that possibility but she recognizes all the pomp and circumstances of the political world."

"When you get right down to it, Washington is just a place where government is the No. 1 business and ordinary people from a cross-section of the country are here to do a job."

'My Standards For Parenting Are So High . . . I Couldn't Measure Up'

The new president of the National Organization for Non-Parents will never be a father.

That's precisely what the Chatanooga, Tenn., native had in mind when he had himself fixed at the age of 28—five years ago.

Naturally, Stephen A. Keese isn't suggesting vasectomy for all men.

But he wants men and women to understand that a child-free lifestyle is perfectly respectable.

I ran into Keese, 33, at the annual convention of the National Organization for Non-Parents the other day in New York. Nowhere were there "down with children" signs—something a nonmember might expect.

Rather than having children, the organization's members believe in responsible parenthood. During a workshop with a psychiatrist leader, married couples openly searched their souls and sought guidance on the question—"Am I parent material?"

Carole Goldman, the group's executive director at national headquarters in Baltimore, Md., is the mother of two.

"We want people to know they can choose parenthood or non-parenthood," Keese said.

"We advocate freedom of reproductive choice, within a framework of personal, social and environmental consciousness.

"This cannot truly exist in a prejudiced cultural context, where parenthood is glorified and non-parenthood too little understood."

The organization is fighting pronatalism. This is social pressure on non-parents. Pressure to encourage reproduction. This policy that exalts the status of parenthood.

"Non-parents find their choice to remain childfree... often raises eyebrows among friends, relatives and even strangers," Goldman said.

"They are subjected to a constant barrage of 'why don't you have children?' type questions."

Keese, Harvard graduate and Peace Corps veteran, made the decision to go through life the non-parent way a couple of years before he had the operation.

"I decided I didn't want to have any children," he said. The things I wanted to accomplish in my lifetime couldn't be done while being a good parent.

"My standards for parenting are so high I don't think I could measure up to them. I also had this feeling that the world was already overpopulated and I'd better practice what I preach."

The National Organization for Non-Parents came into being four years ago. Some of its 2,000 members across the nation had taken the step that Keese took. But they are in the minority.

Bearded and handsome, Keese now makes his living at the Association for Voluntary Sterilization. At the time he decided to have a vasectomy he was farming in the State of Espirito Santo (Holy Spirit State) in Brazil—about 300 miles north of Rio.

He had stayed in the country after his Peace Corps tour there ended. Later he came back to the United States, taking up residence in Milton, Mass., and New York City.

"There were four in my family," he said. "I had a relatively happy childhood. When I made the decision to have a vasectomy I didn't feel I must confront my parents with it."

"It was amusing when I was elected to national office and called my dad. I thought it was time to tell him I'd had a vasectomy some five years ago."

"He said he knew that and had told all his friends up and down the street in Chattanooga."

"Do you like children," I asked Keese.

"I like some children some of the time—which I observe is true of most people," he said.

What is so important about his blueprint for spending his life—So very special that Keese would spurn parenthood? Permanently.

"I want to make the world a better place in which to live," he said. "That covers a lot of territory, obviously."

"I think it's better done directly than through one's children. Doing it directly is more efficient, more effective."

Keese doesn't expect the nonparent organization to grow at a terrific rate.

"We're not dealing with a group of joiners," he said.

"People are members for a while and then move on. What we are interested in is tremendous growth in awareness—that there is a choice, and it's not selfish, to be childfree."

"The last figures from the Census Bureau showed a dramatic rise in the percentage of married women between 18 and 39 who had indicated their intention to have no children. It was 4.2 per cent of the married women in that bracket. That's an almost 50 per cent increase in two years."

The National Organization for Non-Parents budget for the new year is $110,000—private contributions and money from foundations.

"That's better than double the $45,000 budget the year before," Keese said.

"We have three paid staff and one consultant. A large part of what was given to us for this year will go to the Public Media Center in San Francisco for a campaign to raise the public's awareness of the choice for a childfree lifestyle."

"This would be to balance the pronatalist pressure. The media reinforce the pressure. Television shows generally imply that happy families are those with children.

"When a quiz show contestant announces that she is the mother of many children, hearty applause follows. And the birth rate on daytime soap operas seems only slightly less than that of Latin America."

"Women's magazines present the same message, headlining—'The Fulfillment of Motherhood,' 'The Miracles of Birth,' and the like."

"Advertisers are sometimes accused of exploiting sex to sell merchandise but the exploitation of adorable infants and children to sell unrelated products is just as serious."

The non-parents group believes that much of the pronatalist bias will begin to disappear only when society is made aware that it exists and when non-parents are accorded full social approval.

"It is often regarded as selfish for the childfree to choose a lifestyle which offers them personal contentment," Keese said.

"Yet their choice benefits all of us, and holds out the hopes of a better and more spacious world."

I asked Bachelor Keese if marriage was in his future.

"I don't see any reason to get married," he said. "I think it's probably a mistake in most cases. People don't need to get married in most cases."

Dr. Robert Gould, Professor of Psychiatry, New York Medical College, spoke out on "parent material" at the non-parents' annual meeting.

"Once you get into this (parenting) you can't get out of it," Gould said. "It's worse than marriage if it's not for you. At least if it doesn't work, you can get out of a bad marriage."

"With babies, with children you are really stuck if it doesn't work. Some parents have to fake it."

"Considering how really stuck, one should spend a lot of time thinking about having children. Will it enrich your life or make it a hell."

"I cannot tell you how many lives have been absolutely ruined. Children become neurotic. And it costs a lot. Psychiatrists cost a lot."

"I've seen lives turned inside out and backwards."

Gould said it all boils down to deciding—"What is right for me?"

The psychiatrist said change is an ingredient in life and it could be perfectly valid for a couple to follow a lifestyle of non-parenting now and some years later have children.

"Having children gives many meaning to life," he said.

He was asked if being good at raising dogs would mean you're good parent material. "Not necessarily so—especially if you spend too much attention and emotion on the animals."

Dr. Sisodia Heads Up Kingston Emergency

KINGSTON

Jitendra Singh Sisodia of India has more than just degrees from the University of Agra, University of Madras and Christian Medical College in Vellore, India, he has expertise in his field of medicine and projected dreams of an ultra-modern set-up in the treatment of emergency room patients.

As the doctor now heading up the emergency room at Kingston Hospital, Dr. Sisodia told the Freeman he envisions an emergency room center complete with proper ambulance approaches, its own operating room, trained personnel working as emergency teams and facilities permitting 48-hour observation of a patient before transfer to regular floors in the hospital.

"This is not a new concept and it can be instituted here. We are hard at work on it right now," Dr. Sisodia said.

"In this country and throughout the world an emergency room center requires people who know their jobs and it requires facilities close at hand—x-ray, blood bank, laboratories—so that when a patient reaches the emergency room all these services may converge upon him contrary to wondering where you are to get these investigations done," Dr. Sisodia says.

The hospital's emergency room doctor also stresses the importance of a strong liaison with the family physician and the doctor who initially institutes primary care.

"There must be no gap in this relationship," Dr. Sisodia says. "This is also why I personally subscribe to the concept of continued treatment of the ill for at least 48 hours right in an emergency room center."

"The facilities in the proposed new Kingston Hospital will be able to meet these standards and I am looking forward to the time when we will have a group of doctors giving emergency care of a specialized type and nature in the emergency room," the doctor said.

Dr. Sisodia, who is married with two children, also served as a Fellow in Clinical Surgery in French Hospital and was a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. His feelings are definite about being a physician. He says:

"To be a physician is not a prerogative—it is a privilege. I was trained with this principle in mind. Service is what it is all about. The person who has been cared for is really appreciative."

Seeks Indian Love Secrets

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old man who's in love with a beautiful, 28-year-old divorcee. I want to marry her, but she keeps wanting more time to think it over.

In the meantime, she's seeing another man, and I'm afraid he has the edge on me. You see, he's part Kickapoo Indian, and I hear Indians are superior to the white man when it comes to lovemaking: Closely guarded tribal secrets on how to satisfy a woman are passed down from father to son. If there is any truth to that, I'm willing to pay whatever is necessary to find out.

Let me say that I was married for four years, and I never had any complaints from my wife, but if Indians are better lovers than white men, I would like to find out why.

Maybe your readers can help. Thank you.

endocrine glands and their hair-trigger sensitivity.

They hold unlimited power over every human being, keeping one person young and vigorous despite the passing years, condemning another to a premature old age and thrusting a third into a morass of depressed thoughts and nagging ill-health.

The names of these glandular despots are pituitary, thyroid, adrenals, pancreas, thymus, pineal, parathyroids and gonads.

How do these eight glands hold such vast control over your life? Hormones are the dictators which determine whether or not your all-out campaign to look and feel younger will succeed or fail.

Your glands must be nourished with the proper food elements or you can't depend on them to lend you much aid in the effort to regain your vanishing youth.

If a part of the human body could be described as "temperamental," then I would say the word was coined to fit your may possess all the vitality, all the magnetism, all the radiance of a healthy, happy person.

No person can say with authority that any one of these glands is the "most important," because each one has its work so closely tied in with the other seven that a slight upset in one member of the endocrine family reacts almost immediately on the efficiency of the others. What one gland does, or does not do, is registered without fail in the entire clan's activities.

The only way you can tell when your glands are not functioning up to par is when you begin noticing the effects of their suffering. These effects often put in an appearance in spots quite remote from the seat of the original trouble.

For instance, the two adrenal glands (each about as large as a bean) are suspended one above each kidney. When these adrenal glands are not behaving as they should, the skin becomes dark and sallow, with deep lines. Note, please, that they don't advertise their upset by a pain in the small of the back where they are located.

Vibrancy of Youth
Let's consider the glands which perhaps should rank first in your effort to retain the appearances and sensations of youth.

What qualities or attributes make people say of a certain man or woman: "He (or she) is so young for his (her) age?"

My first answer would be sexual vibrancy—for in these two words are contained the confidence, inward feeling of power, energy, vitality, enthusiasm, mental alertness, sense of attractiveness, assurance, stamina and radiant glow which are gifts to the young of any age.

The hormones secreted by the gonads exert a tremendous influence on your physical health, as well as on your ability to retain a youthful appearance and to live a long, useful life.

As a further example of the devious ways in which the endocrine glands proclaim their unhappiness, there is the unpredictable thyroid, located at the front of the neck. Frequently any change in the normal functioning of this well-known gland may bring on ulcers in the stomach or in the upper intestine.

Here is the outstanding fact you need to keep uppermost in mind as you read on:

Your endocrine glands, as well as their youth-giving hormones, are made of protein.

Made of Protein

Protein foods are hormone builders and conditioners. Therefore, a continued lack of high-grade food protein in your diet can weaken these glands to seriously that old age has gained a head start in you almost before you realize it. Feed your glands—not your stomach—if you want to look and feel younger than the calendar says you are.

In addition to protein foods, iron and copper are important to your glands. Rich sources of iron are beef liver and other organ meats, dark poultry meat, lean beef and lamb, egg yolk, apricots, prunes, raisins, molasses, whole grains, lettuce, beet tops, leeks and radishes.

Copper is usually present in the foods containing iron, but especially in almonds, dried beans, whole wheat, prunes, calf and beef liver, shrimp and egg yolks.

And then there are the vitamins. Vitamins and hormones are interdependent. The regular use of a good vitamin-mineral supplement makes nutritional sense—and protects your glands.

You can't be any younger than your glands. And your glands can't stay young and healthy if they are starved. Foods that befriend your glands are the best youth-insurance you can buy.

The Kids Have Ways of Getting Even

I get a lot of mail from teenagers.

Some of it is even signed. One asked me if I was really serious about raising the driving age to 35. (You bet your leaden foot I am.)

Another young reader said he found a way to shut me up for at least four years. He enrolled me in Nyack College in New York. (The computer has been bugging me for the past four months for my high school transcripts.)

The ones who really scare me half to death are the kids who have their own columns and can fight back.

One of them is Marc Talbert, who writes a column for the Iowa State daily paper in Ames, Iowa. In a recent column he wrote, "Erma Bombeck is to the housewife what deodorant is to the armpit."

But there has always been one subject on which she frequently writes that strikes a dissonant chord . . . children in general and teenagers in particular.

Marc goes on to reveal what for years parents have tried to suppress—the fact that children raise their parents.

"It is difficult to raise your parents and make whole, healthy, happy functioning members of society out of them. It can be the most frustrating thing a child ever does."

But, as many kids have discovered, it can also be one of the most fulfilling.

"Now, I've always believed that parents should be told the truth about sex. There are so many things they either don't understand, or else try to hide from. Obviously, Erma, something happened between the time you were married and the time your son entered your life. That something is called

"Dishpan hands?"

"No, it is called sex. It is a beautiful natural part of life. I know this is a lot for you to learn in one sitting. But just toss it over in your mind. After all, how else could you have had a son and a daughter?"

"By eating from the same fork as your father?"

C'mon, Marc. Fight fair. Whenever young people want to win one, they go for the parental Achilles heel . . . their reticence to discuss s-e-x. (Especially with the kids who wrote the book!)

Parents are changing. We really are. We're more open now than we have ever been. Why, on my dorm application for Nyack College, beside the word sex, I filled in "FOR."

Jets To Name Holtz?

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina State football coach Lou Holtz was unavailable for comment Monday night on reports he would be named head football coach of the New York Jets.

Holtz canceled a speech Monday night before the Charlotte Sportman's Club and his office said he was out of town recruiting. Mrs. Holtz said she knew nothing of her husband's acceptance of the job, but she added: "There was some interest there, I know."

The New York Daily News said in its Tuesday morning edition it had learned that Holtz had taken the Jets' job. Jets officials in New York refused to comment on the reports.

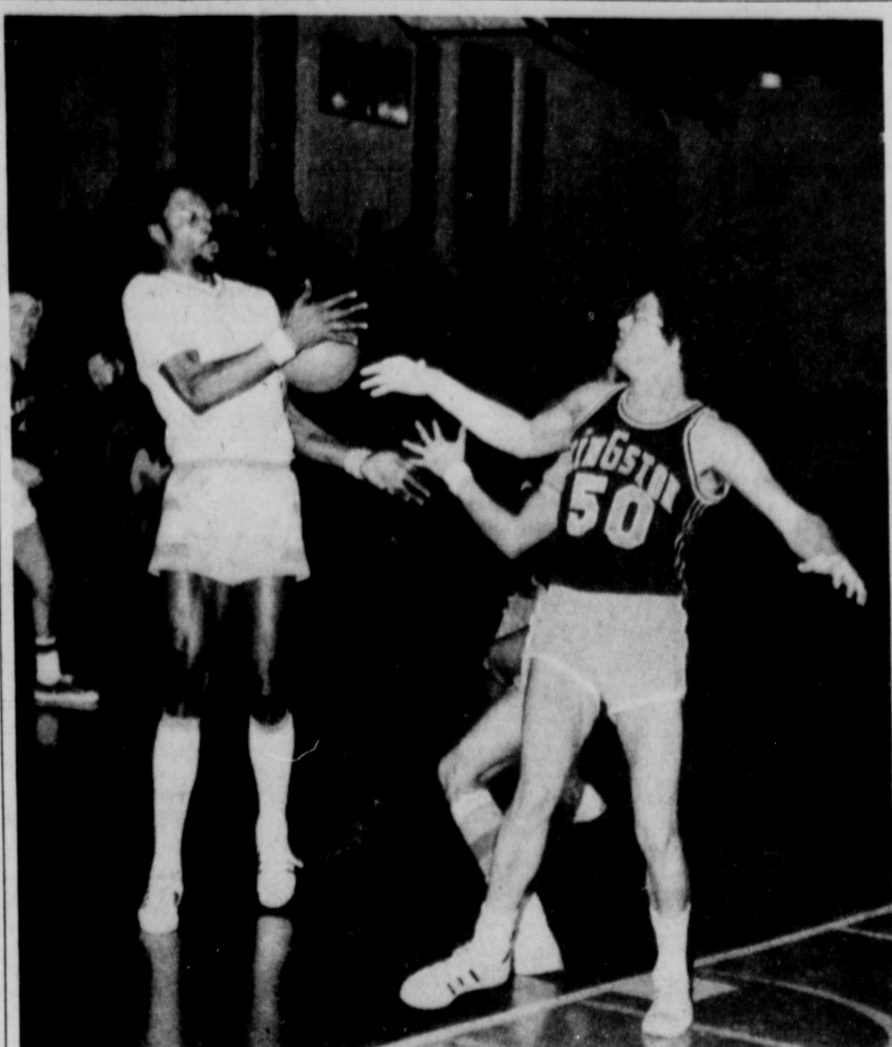

A official at North Carolina State told UPI, however, that "it was a good possibility" Holtz would go to the Jets.

Holtz was selected over five other coaches being considered for the post. They include Johnny Majors, head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh; Bud Carson, defensive coordinator for the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers; Dick Vermeil, who left UCLA Sunday to take over as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles; and Marv Levy, head coach of the Canadian Football League Montreal Alouettes.

If Holtz takes the job, he will succeed Charley Winner, who was fired Nov. 21. Offensive coordinator Ken Shipp took over for Winner on an interim basis and the Jets finished a 3-11, the worst record in their 16-year history.

Holtz came to North Carolina State from William and Mary in 1972. He has not had a losing season since taking over the Wolfpack and has coached the team to four bowl games.

Holtz, a native of Follansbee, W. Va., was graduated from Kent State in 1959. He later received a masters degree from Iowa. He began his coaching career as an assistant at William and Mary from 1961 until 1963. He also served as an assistant at Connecticut, South Carolina and Ohio State before taking over as head coach at William and Mary in 1969.

Big Game at KHS

It's Big Game time in DCSL basketball. With first place on the line, Beacon High invades the Kate Walton Field House tonight at 8 p.m. to face Kingston's Tigers.

The Bulldogs are currently one game up on the defending champs in the standings. Beacon has ten wins; Kingston has nine. Both clubs lost at Beacon earlier in the season, the Bulldogs sent their visitors home with a one point defeat.

One point. That has been the minuscule difference between the fortunes of these two teams this year. Another Beacon victory would change that picture, however. Then the southern Dutchess school would jump two games in front of the pack and be mighty hard to catch. A Kingston win would create a tie for first, and then a comparison of schedules would favor the Tigers the rest of the way.

George Hughes will be the key player on the court. He is a powerful, 6-3 forward, the league's leading scorer, and the bulk of Beacon's attack. He poured in 36 points against KHS the last time.

How effectively the Tigers guard Hughes could decide the outcome. Drawing the assignment will be Mike Rienzo Jr., Kingston's "anti-superstar." Rienzo did a good second half job against Hughes last month.

Elsewhere in the league, Saugerties faces another difficult test at Roosevelt, Arlington will take upset hopes to Poughkeepsie, John Jay will be trying to win a road game at Lourdes and Spackenkill will pay a visit to winless Ketcham.

On the Ulster County Athletic League calendar, Marlboro is at Coleman, Rondout is at Onteora, Highland is at Fallsburgh, Walkkill is at New Paltz, Red Hook is at Pine Bush and Ellenville is at Liberty.

Immerfall Earns Bronze; Mahre's Bid Falls Short

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Dan Immerfall of the University of Wisconsin won a bronze medal for the United States in speed skating today but young Phil Mahre's bid for an Alpine Olympic medal ended in gallant failure.

Immerfall, 20, won his bronze in the men's 500-meters to bring the U.S. total to eight medals—five in speed skating—as the team surpassed the seven won at Sapporo, Japan, four years ago.

Mahre, the sensation of Monday's first giant slalom run when he took fourth place, was unable to get those extra few fractions of a second which would have vaulted him into the medals. He finished fifth but if he was disappointed, reigning champion Gustavo Thoeni of Italy was even more so. The overnight leader finished out of the medals in fourth place.

Switzerland's 27-year-old Heini Hemmi, a journeyman who never had won a race on the World C circuit in six seasons of competition, came up trumps with a two-heat time of 3:26.97 to win the gold medal from teammate Ernst Good and Swedish daredevil Ingemar Stenmark. Stenmark roared from eighth place in the first heat to grab the bronze medal.

Russia picked up two gold medals, through world record holder Evgeni Kulikov in the men's 500 speed skating and Raisa Smetanina in the women's 10-kilometers cross country, and with those two victories became the No. 1 nation in Winter Games history. Norway, with 47 golds dating back to 1924, was the previous record holder but the Soviets now have 48 and probably will add a few more before the Games close Sunday.

Early in the day, East Germany, which dominated the single luge running, added the men's doubles title through Hans Rimm and Norbert Hahn.

Phil Mahre, 18, of White Pass, Wash., zoomed down from the sixth starting position in the first seeded group of 15 runners. He attacked the course in gutsy fashion, cutting every one of the 73 gates close to save those vital fractions, and finished in 1:42.62 for an overall time of 3:28.20.

For brief minutes, Mahre's names was on top of the leader board.

Stenmark, 19, was the next man out of the gate. The Swede, in his customary fashion of abandoning caution on a second run, blitzed his way down the 3,945-foot course, which had a vertical drop of 1,400-feet, and finished in 1:40.90—the best time of the day—and an aggregate of 3:27.41.

Stenmark was now in the lead.

Hemmi was the next man to go and when he finished in 1:41.56 for a 3:26.97, he had what proved to be the winning time. Thoeni followed him down the trail but was slow at the top and was clocked at 3:27.67 which left him in third until Good, going off in 12th place, closed with a 3:27.17 for the silver medal ahead of Stenmark.

Phil Mahre, was not upset at finishing out of the medals. "I skied to the best of my ability and you can take it from there," he said after the race, which was staged on a terribly icy course.

Mahre said he was thrilled to have received a chance to ski in the Olympics and hoped to be back in 1980 when Lake Placid, N.Y., will act as host.

"It feels great. I finished in the top 10 several times this year, but this is a big race because it is the Olympics, so it really feels good." Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif., finished ninth in 3:31.77. Steve Mahre, Phil's twin, was 13th, and Cary Adgate of Boyne City, Mich., was 21st among the 83 starters.

Head Coach Hank Tauber said, "I am really proud of Phil's performance."

"The two Swiss medalists are nine years older than Phil and they used their experience and didn't make any mistakes. He didn't ski as well as he could, so he may have been trying a little too hard."

Thoeni, four-time winner of the World Cup and as big a favorite as any athlete to become the first man in history to win back to back Olympic GS gold medals, could only say "Oh, God," when asked what happened. To cap his discouragement, he spoke to Italian newsmen in German.

Immerfall, a music student at Wisconsin where he is majoring in the clarinet and minoring in the piano and saxophone, said, "I still don't believe it." A half hour after his race and he still couldn't believe he had won a medal.

Immerfall's medal was the eighth won by U.S. athletes at the 12th Games—the fifth by the speed skaters—and helped lift the team past the seven won at Sapporo, Japan, four years ago.

Immerfall, 20, beat Peter Mueller of Wiquon, Wis., by 3-100ths of a second for the bronze medal, echoing what Coach Dianne Holum said when she warned the team, "medals will be won by 100ths of a second, so concentrate on your start."

The gold medal went to world record holder Evgeni Kulikov in an Olympic record 39.17 seconds. Teammate Valeri Muratov took the silver in 39.2 and Immerfall was clocked in 39.54.

The two medal-winning Russians broke the Olympic record of 39.44 seconds set by West Germany's Erhard Keller, but Kulikov's time was well short of his world record of 39.00 set at high Russian training center of Alma Alta 11 months ago.

Mueller, who was eventually to finish fifth—Mats Walberg of Sweden slipped in between him and Immerfall—raced in the second pair and posted a target of 39.54 for the field of 30 to aim at.

Kulikov was in the next pair up and Mueller knew this wasn't going to be a gold medal day. Then came Walberg and the 21-year-old star from Madison, Wis., wasn't thinking in terms of the bronze medal.

Kulakova finished third behind teammate Raisa Smetanina and Finland's Helena Takalo, winner of the 5-kilometers last week, the race which got Kulakova in trouble with the International Olympic Committee after traces of the drug ephedrine were found in her urine sample.

Kulakova took nose drops to ease nasal congestion brought on by a bout of flu.

Skaters Upset Finland

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Steve Jensen scored two goals and Jim Warden turned in another superlative job in the net to lift the United States to a 5-4 upset over Finland today and keep the Americans in contention for an Olympic hockey medal.

It was the first success after two losses for the Americans, but their last two games in the round-robin tournament are against Poland and West Germany, the two weakest teams they have to face.

Finland, which had been picked for the bronze medal, also fell to 1-2.

Mears Has Warning for Vols

Coach Ray Mears felt "super" about Tennessee's smashing victory over Vanderbilt Monday night but had a warning for the Vols that is as old as the game of basketball. It goes like this: "the song of the open road can be the saddest song of all in basketball."

Mears wasn't that poetic about it but made it clear that

Tennessee's impending road games with Florida and Auburn could be the key to the Vols' season.

"The defensive play was super in shutting off Vanderbilt inside," he said after the 73-59 victory which raised eighth-ranked Tennessee's Southeastern Conference record to 10-1. "But we must win those road games against Florida and Auburn because Vanderbilt already has beaten them on the road."

The Vols tightened their grip on first place in the SEC as Ernie Grunfeld scored 24 points. Tennessee trailed 12-4 in the early going but took command early in the second half. In addition to Grunfeld's 24 points, Bernard King had 19 and Johnny Darden 12.

Joe Ford had 19 points and Jeff Fosnes 18 for Vanderbilt, now 8-3 in SEC play.

"We were just outmanned," said Vanderbilt Coach Roy Skinner. "I'm glad they held it for a while toward the end of the game of they would have won by 25 points."

Indiana, ranked No. 1 nationally, defeated Michigan State 85-70 for its 50th straight regular season victory, seventh-ranked Rutgers beat Delaware 110-87, raising its record to 20-0, and 14th-ranked Michigan topped Ohio State 90-66 in the other big games Monday night.

Kent Benson scored 38 points and Scott May added 22 in Indiana's triumph over Michigan State. The unbeaten Hoosiers also made it a record 30 in a row in Big 10 play, including 11 this season. They led 46-37 at halftime and were in command the rest of the way.

Hollis Copeland scored 22 points as Rutgers roared to its 20th consecutive victory. The Scarlet Knights broke away from a 10-10 tie early in the first half and led 50-34 at halftime before turning over the game to reserves in the second half. Steve Schlachter scored 17 points for Delaware. Rickey Green scored 23 points and Wayman Britt added 20 to lead Michigan over Ohio State. Michigan never trailed after zooming off to a 6-0 lead. It was Ohio State's ninth loss in 11 games in Big 10 play this season.

In other games, Walter Jordan's 20 points led Purdue to an 86-58 romp over Northwestern. Illinois whisked away to a 14-point lead early in the first half and never fell behind in beating Wisconsin 70-59. It was Wisconsin's 10th straight Big 10 loss. Adrian Dantley's 27 points paced Notre Dame to a 95-80 win over St. Bonaventure. Georgia scored only its ninth victory in a 63-game series when Jackie Dorsey's 24 points paced the Bulldogs to an 86-81 triumph over Kentucky. Leon Douglas scored 24 points in Alabama's 79-73 win over Florida. Robert Gray had 20 points as Wichita State downed Loyola (Ill.) 79-77. Al Perry's two free throws after time had expired gave Mississippi State a 75-74 triumph over Auburn.

Nuggets 138, Nets 105

David Thompson, Dan Issel, Bobby Jones and Ralph Simpson all scored 20 points or better to lead Denver's scoring onslaught against New York. Thompson had 30 points, Issel 25, Jones 24 and Simpson 20 as the ABA-leading Nuggets soared to their eighth win in nine games.

Spirits 112, Squires 105

Marvin Barnes, who paced St. Louis with 22 points, sparked a fourth quarter surge that put the game away. Down 101-94 with 6:43 left, the Spirits got to within five points of Virginia and then reeled off the final 12 to win going away. Besides Barnes' 22, Ron Boone and Fred Lewis each scored 19.

Newlin Sparks Rockets

By UPI

"Thank goodness," guard Mike Newlin told teammate Rudy Tomjanovich at halftime, "we're not ahead by 20."

Houston held a slim 47-43 lead but Newlin remembered all too painfully in the Rockets' two previous NBA games that they blew 21 and 15-point leads. He wanted no repeat against the flu-ridden Kansas City Kings Monday night.

So with two minutes gone in the last quarter, the hustling Newlin watched the Kings catch up before scoring 11 of his 32 points and sparking the Rockets to a 105-86 win which pulled them to within three of the NBA Central Division lead.

The Rockets are still third behind Washington and Cleveland but with performances like they put on in the fourth quarter, they could challenge the leaders. Houston led 74-73 before outscoring the Kings 31-13 in the final 10 minutes.

Afterwards, Newlin wondered whether his team should ever forge a big lead early.

"It always is a detriment for us to get ahead," he said.

Ron Riley came off the bench to score nine points and grab nine rebounds in bringing the Rockets out of their early sluggishness.

The first three quarters were sloppily played but Kansas City had an excuse. Their top scorer and playmaker, Nate Archibald, was home with the flu, as was reserve Matt Goukas. Coach Phil Johnson only suited up nine players and center Sam Lacey, who scored 13 points, took a shot to the right eye and sat out for a while.

Helping Newlin were guard Calvin Murphy and center Kevin Kunnert with 16 points each and Ed Ratleff with 13. The Kings were led by Scott Wedman with 19 points and Jimmy Walker with 18.

There were no other NBA games scheduled. In the only American Basketball Association action, Denver routed the New York Nets 138-119 and St. Louis downed Virginia 112-105.

Suspended

The Detroit Red Wings suspended star right winger Mickey Redmond ('75 file photo) Monday and placed him on $30,000 waivers. The announcement came following weeks of speculation about the future of the 29-year-old star, the first Red Wing to score 50 goals in a single season. (UPI)

Baseball Owners Optimistic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major League baseball and the Players Association return to the bargaining table today with the owners hoping to inject some life into the stalled negotiations in time to begin spring training as scheduled.

With spring training precariously near — only three weeks away — and an almost total lack of progress in negotiations to date, the owners met Monday to receive a report on the negotiations from baseball's Players Relations Committee.

The stodgy wall in the negotiations neither side has been able to overcome has been baseball's controversial reserve clause, but the owners were optimistic there would be some progress when the talks resume today.

The owners said it is fairly certain they will appeal Judge

Swimmer Tim Shaw

Sullivan Award Winner

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Tim Shaw, the teen-aged swimming sensation who set world records in three freestyle events last year, Monday was named the 46th winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy.

Shaw became the 17th Californian to win the coveted award, which is symbolic of the amateur athlete of the year.

Shaw, 18, received 1,840 points in the balloting, followed by Bruce Jenner, 26, decathlon world record holder from San Jose, Calif., 1,660 points; and Shirley Babashoff, 18, the No. 1 female freestyle swimmer from Mission Viejo, Calif., 1,553 points. Shaw's world records in 1975 included the 400 meters in 3:53.31, 800 in 8:09.6 and 1,500 in 15:20.91. He also shares the world record in the 800-meter freestyle relay in 7:30.54 with Long Beach Swim Club teammates Bruce and Steve Furniss and Rex Favero.

The Long Beach State freshman also won golds in the 200, 400 and 1,500-meter freestyles in the World Games at Cali, Columbia, last summer.

Marvin Miller, the executive director of the Players Association, said there could not be negotiation on the issue at the same time there is litigation.

The players are willing to continue under the current situation, with Decision 29 currently the prevailing law.

The key to the negotiations' success is how much the owners are willing to give in the battle over the reserve system.

The third, dismissal of a $32.5 million lawsuit against the A.L. filed by the state of Washington, King County and the city of Seattle, almost has been settled.

The state and county are willing to drop the suit, but Seattle is holding out for a $750,000 monetary damage settlement from the A.L. to recoup incidental expenses in fixing up Sicks Stadium for an expansion franchise in 1969. The Seattle Pilots were transferred to Milwaukee the next year.

DWI Rehab Course

STONE RIDGE
An innovative traffic safety program which will make it possible for conditional driver's licenses to be issued to some motorists convicted of driving while intoxicated will start Feb. 17 in Ulster County at Ulster County Community College.

The program — the New York State Drinking Driver Program — is being handled by the Office for Continuing Education at the college.

Under the program, mandated by the State Legislature, motorists convicted of DWI, or driving while ability impaired by alcohol, may attend classes designed to help rehabilitate themselves.

Most motorists enrolled in the program will receive "conditional" driver's licenses allowing them to drive under, and only under, limited conditions stipulated on their individual licenses.

The program was started to give many convicted drinking drivers, whose licenses are suspended or revoked, the incentive to try to rehabilitate themselves.

One condition of the license is that the driver enroll in and attend a 16-hour training course like the one being offered at UCCC.

Those behind the program

say it will give the courts a reasonable alternative to the traditional choice between drastic punitive action required by alcohol-related convictions that may cost a job and accepting pleas to lesser charges.

In the 16-hour program at UCCC, an attempt will be made to identify drivers with alcohol problems and to refer them, where appropriate, to professional treatment programs.

Further information about the course may be obtained by calling the Office for Continuing Education at UCCC.

Sales Tax Returns

KINGSTON
Ulster County and the city of Kingston both took a "conservative" view of sales tax revenues in 1975 and it paid off, in the county's case, to the tune of almost $250,000.

Ulster figured to receive $4.2 million in sales tax revenues for 1975. A recent report from the State Department of Taxation and Finance shows gross receipts of $4,445,488.

The city of Kingston figured receipts of $1,590,000 for 1975 and received $1,599,635. The county has a one per cent sales tax; the city's is two per cent.

For 1976, the county appears to be taking a more liberal view of its sales tax receipts, anticipating $4.7 million.

The city remains conservative, actually cutting its estimate by some $40,000, figuring on total receipts of $1,550,000 for this year.

The city of Poughkeepsie realized $1,792,125 from its two per cent sales tax. Poughkeepsie has about 7,000 more people than Kingston.

UCCC Seeks Adults

STONE RIDGE
Dean Ronald A. Koster of Ulster County Community College reports his office has found some difficulty in locating prospective participants for some "significant programs."

"This problem reaches critical proportions," he explains, "in regard to three of what we consider our more important offerings—high school equivalency, basic reading skills for adults, and English as a second language."

The former is offered at the college as a credit free course. The other two have been provided in the past through contractual arrangements with area business or industry, or with state or local social service agencies.

The college will provide counseling on financial assistance for those who are concerned about the ability to pay for instruction, said Koster, Associate Dean of Faculty for Continuing Education.

The college suggests that county residents recruit prospective students for the college.

PSC Approves Gas Plan

ALBANY
Eleven New York State gas utilities have been granted formal approval by the Public Service Commission to participate in a Gulf Coast onshore gas exploration program.

The PSC approved the Gulf Coast Research and Exploration Agreement in principle last Nov. 17, but denied the utilities' request for permission to finance the program through a surcharge on their customers' bills.

In its official order this week the PSC specified that its ruling "does not constitute approval for rate case purposes of any expenditures" in the program.

Operating as the New York Gas Group, the 11 utilities (including Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation) have agreed to put up $15.8 million to cover an 80 per cent share in drilling and completion costs and other expenses of the program.

They projected production of an average of 7.8 billion cubic feet of gas annually over the first ten years, listing an average wellhead cost of about 22 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Rules GE Violation On PCBs

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A state Department of Environmental Conservation hearing officer has ruled the General Electric Co. violated environmental laws by discharging PCBs into the Hudson River from its Fort Edward and Hudson Falls factories.

Abraham D. Sofaer, in an opinion issued Monday in a hearing on an EnCon order for GE to stop all PCB discharges, said the company "will at a minimum be ordered drastically to limit its discharges, as it claims itself willing and able to do."

The chemical — polychlorinated biphenyl — is used as an insulator in capacitors manufactured at the two plants. It is believed to cause cancer.

The company will also have to act "to rectify the effects of its prior violations where lawfully proper, and economically and environmentally practicable," Sofaer said.

The Columbia University law professor named by EnCon Commissioner Ogden Reid to preside over the hearing also blasted regulatory agencies and the company for "bureaucratic insufficiencies."

"Neither the legislature nor the public," Sofaer wrote, "should be deceived by this focus on GE's activities into assuming that government has otherwise dealt in a meaningful, institutional fashion with PCBs or with other hazardous substances being discharged into our environment."

Sofaer said hearings will have to be resumed to determine to what discharge levels GE should be limited.

EnCon and the federal Environmental Protection Agency have proposed limiting GE to zero PCB discharge, a standard the company has said cannot be met with presently available technology.

The 77-page opinion said GE had violated two sections of the state's environmental conservation law covering general pollution and dumping of industrial wastes.

In Opposition to Carey's Budget Cuts

Massive Student Drive Planned

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Student associations at the state and New York City universities have promised "a massive student voter registration drive" in hopes of avoiding stiff budget cuts for both systems.

Robert H. Kirkpatrick, president of the Student Association of the State University, told a news conference Monday his group and its City University of New York counterpart would coordinate the drive with a grassroots lobbying effort in each state legislator's district against Gov. Hugh L. Carey's proposed budget cuts for higher education.

At the same time, Assemblyman Seymour Posner, D-Bronx, announced he has introduced a bill barring the elimination of either free tuition or open admissions at the city colleges.

In his $10.8 billion 1976-77 state budget, unveiled last month, Carey called for a 9 per cent cut in "state purposes" expenditures for SUNY and said he "anticipated SUNY action to increase tuition and dormitory charges."

"The over one-half million public university students in New York State are a different breed of citizen in 1976 than they were a decade ago," Kirkpatrick said.

"We intend to use our total energies to insure that our state lives up to its responsibilities to provide a quality and accessible public education to its citizens," he said.

Carey proposed state aid to CUNY "which will require severe cutbacks ... reduced enrollments, and quite likely, imposition of increased charges." The state Board of Regents is among those who have called for tuition for all CUNY students.

Maynard Jones, chairman of CUNY's University Student

Senate, attacked both Carey's proposed cuts in CUNY programs and those already made by the Emergency Financial Control Board, set up by the state to oversee New York City's fiscal recovery.

"Since the cutting process began, CUNY has been cut nearly $150 million," Jones said. "The results have been devastating."

"Faculty and administrators have been fired, fees have risen drastically, tuition for graduate students has skyrocketed, course offerings have been sharply curtailed, class sizes have bloated, library hours have shrunk and acquisitions of books have halted," he charged.

Jones said there would be "no compromise" by his group in the battle to retain free undergraduate tuition and open enrollment at CUNY.

Posner, a CUNY graduate, charged that, "To use a transitory budget deficit, as some officials want to do, as an excuse to abandon open admissions and free tuition is a sham perpetrated on the public."

"Let's face it, once tuition is imposed it will never be removed," he said. "Instead, it will probably increase year after year."

"For years, when CUNY enrollments consisted mainly of white immigrants' children, free tuition was never in doubt, even in the Great Depression," Posner said.

"Now that enrollment is increasingly black and Hispanic — the groups that suffer most from discrimination — we would be callous indeed to end open admissions and free tuition, slamming in the door of higher education in their faces," he said.

Let Albany know how you stand. NOW.

The State Court of Appeals in a ruling handed down in December, prohibits savings banks from continuing to offer NOW (payment order) accounts, which are similar in nature to checking accounts.

Also, the Court decision allows savings banks to continue servicing their present NOW accounts only through March 31, 1976.

The Court's verdict was announced after months of hearings which resulted from an action filed by competitive financial institutions in July, 1974. Less than two months prior to that date, the New York State Superintendent of Banks issued regulations allowing savings banks to provide NOW or Payment Order accounts.

The legal action against savings banks NOW accounts indicated that they, "constitute unfair competition," and are in "violation of banking laws."

While rendering its decision, the Court, at the same time did say, "That savings banks ought to be permitted to offer checking account services, for which there is considerable local and national support, should be addressed to the Legislature and not to the courts . . ."

Heritage Savings Bank is in total agreement with this invitation to the Legislature to act. Heritage should be able to offer checking accounts.

Savings Banks depositors in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey, among others, enjoy NOW or checking accounts.

Why not New York State savings banks depositors? Since their introduction in 1974, the response to NOW Accounts at Heritage Savings Bank has been excellent. This indicates that you, our customers, like, need, want and deserve this service. Therefore, we don't feel it should be taken away.

We don't feel you should be discriminated against.

We're going to fight the Court's decision all the way. We feel we owe that much to the people who have helped support Heritage Savings Bank over the years.

You can help. And, we hope you will.

Let Albany know how you stand. Take a few minutes to write to your local legislator. Tell your representative you want action. And, you want it fast. That as a taxpayer and consumer you are entitled to have NOW or checking accounts at your savings bank.

You can also remind the men and women who represent you in Albany that the national trend is clearly broadened powers for savings banks. This includes checking accounts. And a bill containing that provision recently passed the United States Senate.

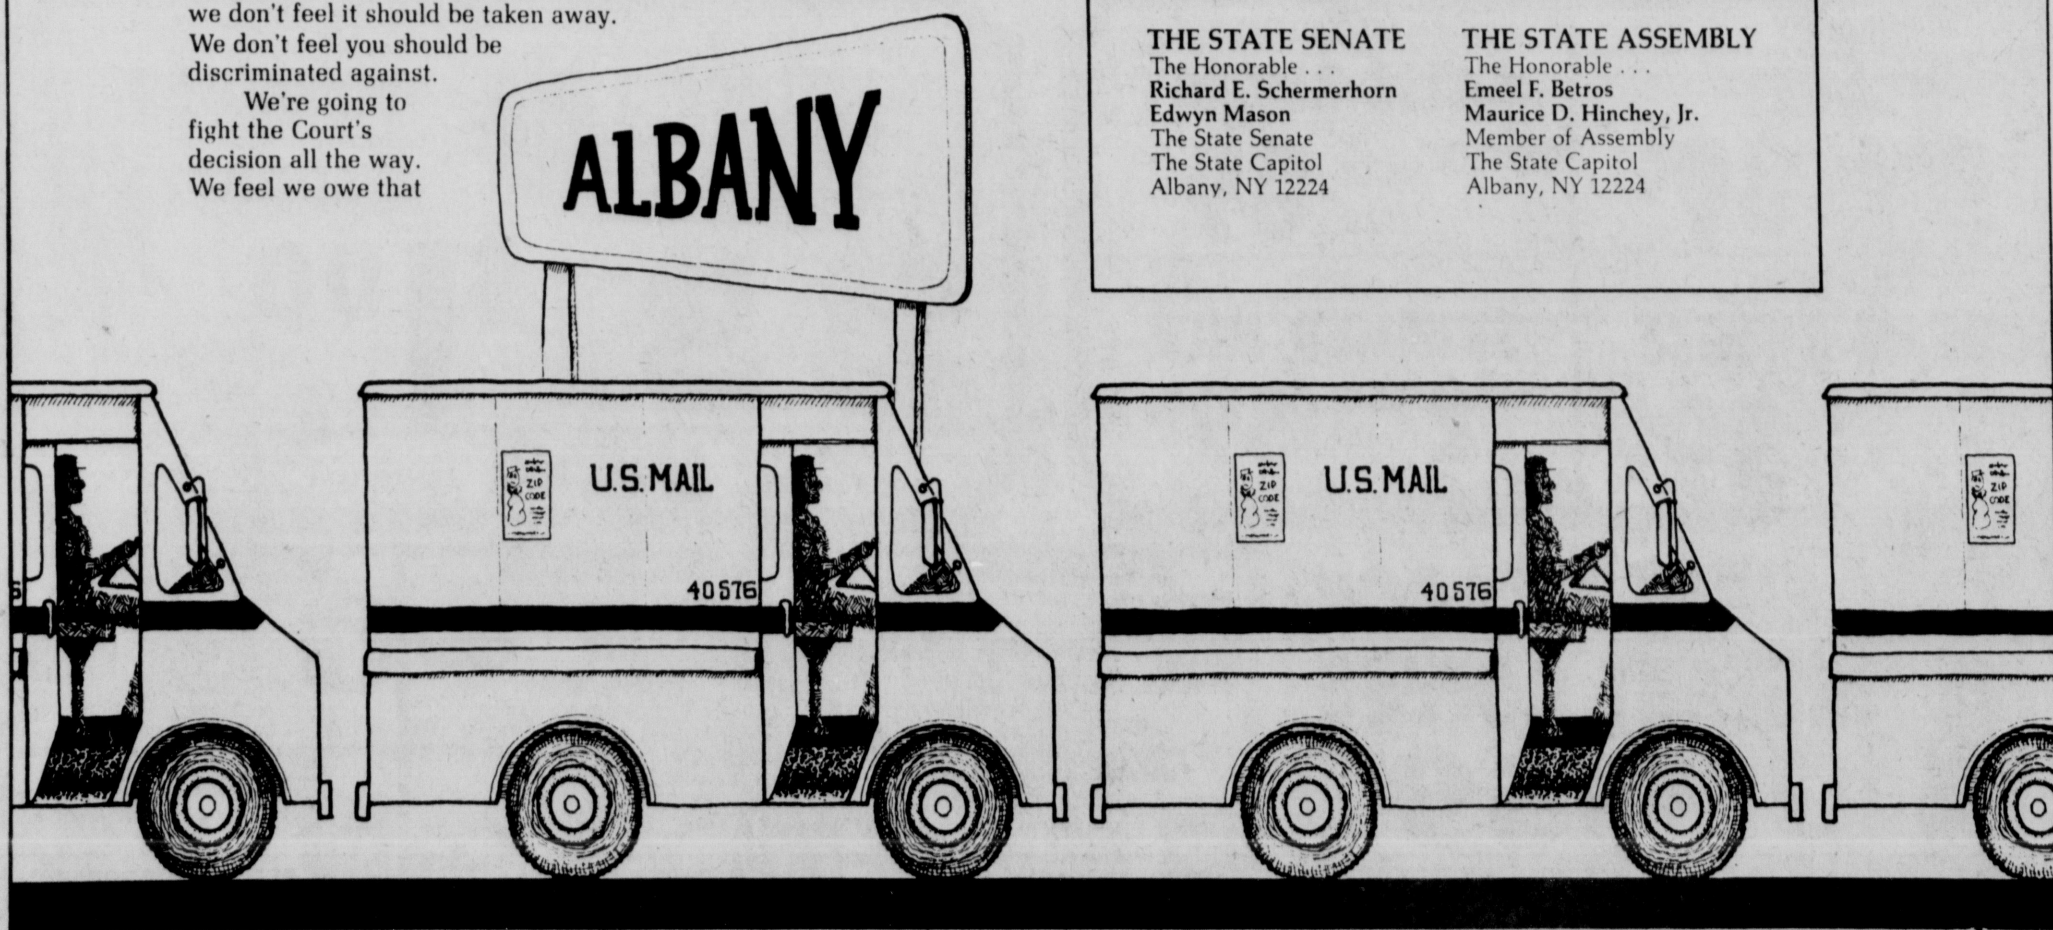

This is an election year — so you can be sure all legislators will be especially sensitive to all suggestions from voting constituents.

Below is a list of the people who represent you at the State Capitol.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

ALMOST?: (Q.) Joe and I hang around each other a lot. I feel great when we are together, but my problem is that he has a girl friend. I know he doesn't really like her or we wouldn't spend so much time together.

Once he almost kissed me. We were at a phone booth at school. My friend came over and caught us so we didn't, but we would have.

His girl friend isn't pretty and she is fat. Joe is just feeling sorry for her. That's why he likes her. What can I do? I really like him and I know he'd be happier with me.—15 in Pennsylvania

(A.) As far as I can see from your letter, Joe hasn't told you he doesn't like his girl friend, and he hasn't told you that he does like you.

You want it to be that way, however, and you have decided that that is the way it is. Sometimes we can fool ourselves very convincingly. I believe you have done that to yourself.

Slow down; get your feet on the ground. Until Joe takes some definite step to date you, or at least to declare that he likes you better than the other girl, don't build your hopes up so high.

WRONG GIRL: (Q.) I am going out with this girl, Kim. She is nice and treats me really good. But I do not much like her. The reason is that I like this girl Shelley, and she likes me too. How do I tell Kim I don't want to bother with her anymore?—Stuck in Massachusetts

(A.) You are not stuck. You do not have a contract for life to take Kim out. When you no longer want to take her out you can stop.

You don't HAVE to explain to her but it would be kind and decent to tell her the truth—that you like someone else and want to go with her.

You don't have to tell Kim who the other person is if you don't want to.

(Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

Something advantageous may be offered to you today from a least expected source — perhaps through a co-worker.

trump suit while two hearts were shed from dummy. Then South cashed his ace of diamonds and went into a huddle to end all huddles. East surely held eight clubs. He had played three spades and a diamond. Was his other card another diamond or a heart? Finally South decided to play for a 4-0 heart break. He led a heart, stuck in dummy's nine and had thrown away a slam.

If South had thought clearly he would have realized that East would have doubled six spades to call for a heart lead if he didn't hold any hearts.

City officials gather around the Wicks Hose fire truck which was delivered to Rondout Station for inspection last week. The Wicks truck was the last of three new 750-gallon-per minute pumpers ordered by the city two years ago. Rapid Hose got theirs on Oct. 4 while the Cordts truck was placed in service on Oct. 24, 1975. ## Field Narrows for Road Boss

KINGSTON The field of candidates for the post of Ulster County Superintendent of Highways has reportedly narrowed to three men—Acting Superintendent Richard Gray, John Salapatis of Kingston and Kenneth Smith of Saugerties.

The Bridge and Highway Committee is scheduled to meet Wednesday to not only continue deliberations on a choice but to consider proposing a county law which would remove the requirement that a superintendent hold a professional engineer's degree.

Neither Gray, Salapatis or Smith hold such degrees. A new superintendent is needed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation last year of Jose Camallonga Jr. at the height of a special committee and grand jury probe of the department.

Gray, who lives in Accord and was one of three general foremen who took over after Camallonga's resignation in August, was appointed to his post as deputy superintendent by a vote of the legislature.

Salapatis' name along with Gray's was mentioned for the superintendent's post almost immediately following Camallonga's resignation, with former Democratic Legislator Lewis C. Kirschner coming out publicly for Salapatis. A retired colonel of the U.S. Air Force, he has been employed by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation as project engineer. While attending City College of New York, he majored in civil engineering.

Smith who is supported by Saugerties Republicans, is employed by the State Transportation Department.

Six More Months for Hudson Cement

KINGSTON Hudson Cement Co. has been granted a six-month extension of compliance with regulations of the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) concerning discharge of water into the Hudson River.

New dates for the schedule of compliance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act are May 30, 1976, for the engineering report; Oct. 30, 1976, for submission of final plans and specifications; Jan. 30, 1977, for start of construction; May 31, 1977, for end of construction; and July 1, 1977 for attaining effluent limits.

The permit issued to the company concerns discharges of water from the cement processing plant, where some of the water is allowed to evaporate, with the rest discharged into a settling basin. The discharge from the basin goes through a 24-inch pipe to the river. Cooling water and spillage from the aggregate producing plant is discharged through another 24-inch drain. These are located 400 and 1,600 feet south of the boundary line between Kingston and the Town of Ulster.

Interested persons may submit written comments to the Chief of Status Compliance Branch, EPA Region II, Room 1005, 26 Federal Plaza, New York, N. Y. 10007, no later than March 9. In lieu of or in addition to written comments, any interested person may request that a public hearing be held to consider the modification request. Requests must be in writing and submitted no later than March 9, must state the name and address of the person making the request and of any other persons represented by him, must identify the interest of the requestor which would be affected, and state the particular reason for the request, the issues proposed to be discussed, and the requestor's position on them.

An EPA official said the Hudson Cement's request for the extension was to establish a more accurate evaluation of intake of discharge water.

Third New Paltz Dorm Robbery

By Matt Spireng

NEW PALTZ For the third time in two weeks, armed robbers struck Monday night in a dormitory on the campus at the State University College at New Paltz.

One of four victims of the armed holdup was pistol-whipped and was listed in "stable" condition today at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

Police said the robbery occurred at about 11:30 p.m. in a dormitory room at DuBois Hall. Two males and two females, one of whom were identified, were in the room at the time. The robbers, said to include four Oriental males and one black female, knocked on the door to the room and forced their way in when one of the occupants opened the door. One male victim was pistol whipped and all four of the victims were tied up while the quintet ransacked the room. They fled with more than $200 in cash and articles of clothing.

Police said the female robber, who carried a butcher knife, was about 5 feet 6, 115 pounds, with a black Afro hairdo, parted in the middle. The four males were said to be all in their early twenties and between 5 feet 10 and 6 feet. One was armed with a revolver and two carried knives, authorities said.

Edward Shannon, campus security head, said it is not believed the robbers are the same ones who struck two times previously in the past two weeks. On Jan. 26, three robbers, including an Oriental female, an Oriental male and a black male, made off with $380 after robbing a student in Lefevre Hall. On Jan. 30 two "dark-skinned" males robbed three occupants of a room in Bouton Hall, taking $40.

Thruway Fatal

A Glendale man was killed Monday afternoon in a one-car roll-over crash on the Thruway in the Town of Plattekill.

Thruway state police identified the dead man as Daniel Manley, 25, a passenger in a car operated by Don Mosher, 28, of Haverstraw, Coroner

Police Beat

Arthur C. Chipp, whose ruling is pending the outcome of a post mortem examination today, said Manley was nearly decapitated in the crash.

Police said Mosher was driving south when his car ran off the road, traveled 350 feet along a ditch, struck an embankment, and flipped over. Another passenger in the vehicle, Frank Nosek, 25, of the Bronx, was taken to Kingston Hospital following the crash and was admitted. He was listed in satisfactory condition today.

Mosher and a fourth passenger, John Papkowich, 27, of Bayside, Queens, were not reported seriously injured in the crash.

State police said some of the occupants of the vehicle were pinned in the car. Police said the probable cause for the crash was speed too fast for conditions, adding that criminal action is pending.

Second Charge

A Barclay Heights burglary suspect who eluded police for about three hours Monday morning after being spotted in Turk's Arco Garage, Route 9W, by a Town of Saugerties patrolman has been charged in connection with a second burglary. Police have also arrested the owner of a used car lot in connection with the case.

State police BCI investigators and Saugerties Town Police charged John Polcastro, 22, of Glasco, who allegedly broke into the Arco garage, with a second count of third degree burglary Monday in connection with a break-in at another Saugerties gas station early Monday morning.

Police said that as a result of the arrest, search warrants were obtained for the home and business of J. Paul Whitten, 48, of Box 105, Lake Katrine, proprietor of J. Paul's Used Cars, Route 9W.

Police said items allegedly taken in the two service station burglaries, including auto supplies and a television, were recovered during execution of the search warrants by state police and Saugerties Town Police. Whitten was charged with second degree criminal possession of stolen property. Following arraignment he was jailed in lieu of $5,000 bail. Polcastro was previously jailed in lieu of $3,000 bail.

Recovered

Ulster County Sheriff's deputies recovered a car stolen early today in the Town of Esopus after the auto crashed on Dashville Road in that town.

Deputies said an alert resident spotted the car, a 1971 Pinto, in a ditch on Dashville Road shortly before 7:30 a.m. Police said the person who stole the car apparently fled on foot following the crash and he or she may have been injured.

Put a Price on His Head

KINGSTON District Attorney Francis J. Vogt announced on Monday that a $500 reward is being offered by the WGHQ Justice Fund for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a male who entered an Emerson Street residence on Jan. 29 and attacked a 14-year-old girl.

Vogt said he has discussed the case with investigating officers and has been advised that there are no leads at present to the identity of the intruder.

"In view of the above, the WGHQ Justice Fund will offer $500 to any individual for information provided the Kingston city police or the district attorney's office leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the attack," Vogt said, explaining that the reward offer will remain in effect for 30 days.

Following the incident, detectives said the girl, who was not identified, was lying on the floor studying at her home at about 7 p.m. Jan. 29 when a man suddenly grabbed her from behind, held a hand over her mouth, dragged her into a bedroom and began to sexually molest her. The girl's attacker fled when she screamed, police said. He was described as being a white male, 5 feet 8 to 5 feet 10, wearing a brown ski hat and a blue jacket and jeans.

The reward is the first being offered by the WGHQ Justice Fund, formed in December and begun with personal contributions of $100 each from Vogt and WGHQ Board Chairman Harry Thayer. Thayer, in an "Editorial of the Air" at the time the fund was formed, explained that its aim is to aid in the fight against crime in Ulster County and that it was hoped $5,000 in contributions could be received for the fund.

Contributions for the fund can be taken or mailed to WGHQ, 82 John Street.

Enters Guilty Plea

KINGSTON John Whitworth, 21, of Napanoch, pleaded guilty Monday in Ulster County Court to third degree burglary.

The charge against Whitworth, who was represented by Attorney Albert Lonstein, stemmed from an alleged burglary at a southern Ulster County electronics firm last May. He had been indicted along with two others in the case last August.

County Judge Raymond J.

Mino set March 24 as the date for sentencing. Assistant District Attorney Paul Gruner represented the People at the time the plea was entered.

In other county court matters, an indictment charging Peter Medici, Steven Poirier and Paul Rivera with first degree sodomy was dismissed by Judge Mino on the recommendation of the district attorney's office.

The three were indicted on the charge in connection with a Jan. 1975 incident at the Ulster County Jail, where they were then inmates, being housed for Rockland County.

Canadian Seamen Buried Alive

ONE BODY IS LOWERED FROM SHIP.

LATER, RESCUE WORKERS BRING THE SECOND TO SHORE.

(Freeman photos by Haines)

CEMENTON
Two Canadian seamen were buried in a grave of gypsum early today while working in the hold of a freighter docked at the Alpha Portland Cement Company plant in Cementon.

Both men were killed. One was recovered shortly after the incident occurred. It took rescue personnel about seven hours to unearth the second body.

The two men, who were not identified, were working in the hold of the 10,000 ton freighter Cape Breton Miner at about midnight when they were buried under a small landslide of gypsum.

Crewmen aboard the ship, employees at the cement company and volunteer rescue personnel worked to free the trapped seamen.

State Police from the Leeds substation in Greene County were told by ship's officers that the gypsum apparently became frozen during the passage from Toronto, Canada to the Hudson River Valley. Four crewmen, preparing the mineral for unloading later today, were attempting to loosen the rock when it gave way.

Two of the crewmen, said troopers, managed to scramble to safety. Two others, including the ship's first mate, were trapped in the landslide.

Other members of the crew began immediate rescue operations. The arm of one of the trapped seamen protruded from the rubble, and his body was the first to be recovered. Using pick axes and shovels, rescue workers found the second body at about 7 a.m.

The Cape Breton Miner, owned by the Leitch Transport Co. of Toronto, was tied up at Alpha's Hudson River dock. Her cargo is a common ingredient in the manufacture of cement products.

Alpha officials would not comment on the incident today and ship's officers were not available. Only the rescue workers and police were allowed on board.

The identities of the two seamen were withheld pending notification of their families. Authorities said both were from Nova Scotia.

Ponckhockie Support Voiced

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

If testimony at last night's public hearing is any indicator, the Community Development Advisory Council will recommend that the city spend most if not all of this year's $1,359,000 in federal funds in the Ponckhockie section of the city with a good portion of that going for acquisition of Kingman Park.

In terms of public participation, last night's public hearing was a distinct improvement over the first public hearing on Community Development priorities, where only four persons spoke at a hearing that lasted less than half an hour. Last night's hearing featured 20 speakers and lasted almost an hour and a half.

Ponckhockie was well represented, but appeals were also heard for:

- Recreation facilities at the old city dump off Summer Street;
- Sidewalks and docking facilities in West Strand;
- Storm drains in the Third Ward, in particular on Glen Street, the Boulevard and Pettit Avenue;
- An overall city program to adapt publicly used buildings for the benefit of the elderly and the handicapped.

The Kingman Park proposal was something entirely new for the Community Development program, which is heavily involved in recreation, based on its 1975 plan, but has done virtually nothing in the area of conservation.

There were several speakers recommending the city acquire and maintain the natural state of Kingman Park, most of which is now owned by the Shults family.

Donald Bruyn, chairman of the Ulster County Environmental Management Council, was the first to address the Community Development Advisory Council on that subject.

Elizabeth Heitzman of 64 Moore Street advocated much the same thing as did Joanne Myers of 75 Brewster Street, who spoke as a member of the Mid-Hudson Chapter of the Sierra Club.

Robert Johnson of West Strand asked the Council to consider docking facilities along the Rondout in West Strand.

He also raised the issue of Project SCORE in West Strand which acquired three buildings from the city some three years ago and has done little to improve them. Johnson said one of the buildings has no roof and could collapse, taking others with it.

Arlene Hendricks of Ponckhockie asked the Advisory Council to consider "pocket parks" for children up to seven years of age in that area of the city.

Benjamin Wigfall of 241 Catherine Street suggested a small cultural center or museum for the Rondout area. "It's a very, very important part of Kingston's history," he said.

Joseph Epstein, who said he's done business in Rondout for 52 years, noted that there once were four banks in the area and 2,000 people working there. "If you can bring back even half of that to Rondout, you'll be doing a swell job," he said.

Epstein also called for the part ition of the five-acre parcel in Broadway East, planned as the site for a shopping plaza but vacant since 1969. "Everything else has failed," he said. Epstein recalled that back in 1967 he put up a $1,000 pledge (along with several other businessmen) with the urban renewal agency to show his "good intentions to start a business in Broadway East." He said the money was returned by the urban renewal agency a year later.

Mrs. Eleanor Sinsabaugh of 36 North Street, called for new sanitary sewers on North Street. "We might as well be back in 1776," she told her husband, Alderman Clifford Sinsabaugh, the presiding officer at the hearing. "We don't even have any sewers (in reference to a previous speaker's request for "improved" sewers on Gill Street). Some of us have septic tanks. Some of us have direct lines into the lagoon."

Questioned after the public hearing, Sinsabaugh said the Advisory Council had not drawn up a program for the city's 1976 application but indicated it would rely heavily on testimony heard at this year's public hearings.

The city has until Feb. 23 to file its application with a state clearing house.

In a related development, the state has returned the city's application on some $300,000 in discretionary funds for the rehabilitation of the old City Hall. That application must be in federal hands for consideration prior to Feb. 13.

UPI DATELINE

Last Angolan Offensive?

LUSAKA, Zambia — Thousands of Cuban combat troops have overrun the pro-Western capital of Huambo and today pushed toward the vital supply base of Silva Porto in what could be the final offensive of the Angolan civil war.

The loss of Huambo Monday was the worst defeat by the pro-Western coalition in nine months of the war. Military experts in Lusaka said the allies could collapse within the next few days unless they receive massive supplies of sophisticated arms.

Lebanon Reforms Delayed

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Last-minute dickering among politicians today held up the announcement of political reforms deemed essential to stabilize Lebanon's 10-day-old cease-fire into permanent peace.

Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh conferred with his political advisers on the draft of a presidential announcement that would outline the reforms, agreed on by right-wing Christians and leftist Moslem factions.

Originally Franjeh had been expected to announce the "new deal" Wednesday after meeting with Premier Rashid Karami and his six-man cabinet.

Split in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel — Members of three political parties, including dissidents in Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor bloc, are considering replacing him with Defense Minister Shimon Peres, Israeli newspapers said today.

The Ma'ariv newspaper said the move was prompted by a feeling that a rift between Rabin and Peres was irreparable. However it said the friction so far posed no immediate threat to Rabin's leadership.

The split involved criticism by Rabin of a shopping list for U.S. weaponry prepared by the Defense Ministry.

Car Output Trimmed

DETROIT — The juggling that U.S. automakers have done with their production schedules to meet shifts in customer demand has trimmed about 10,000 cars from February's planned output.

The trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports also said Monday that combined car and truck production in this country in March will give the U.S. industry its first 1-million month since October of 1974. That includes 832,000 cars and 265,000 trucks.

Nancy Doing Fine

BOSTON — Nancy Kissinger continues to improve following surgery that removed 40 per cent of her stomach to relieve a chronic gastric ulcer.

Mrs. Kissinger was "up and around" and drinking liquids Monday, two days after the operation at Massachusetts General Hospital.

"Mrs. Kissinger is continuing to do well. She took her first liquid this morning, aside from water, and she's been up and around her room again today," Drs. George L. Nardi and W. Gerald Austin said in a statement.

Ford Signs Defense Bill

WASHINGTON — President Ford today signed a $112.3 billion defense appropriations bill, but denounced a provision halting U.S. aid to Angola and said he accepted the measure only because of importance of the programs it finances.

"I am deeply disappointed that the Congress has acted in this bill to deprive the people of Angola of the assistance needed to resist Soviet and Cuban military intervention in their country," Ford said in a statement.

Mancuso Fumes, Stampfle Applauds

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

While the uptown businessmen are applauding Mayor Francis R. Koenig's decision to veto the Pike Plan parking ban legislation passed by the Common Council last week, the bill's sponsor, Majority Leader Peter J. Mancuso, D-12th Ward, is seething.

"I'm very disappointed," he said Monday. "The mayor's decision is only a pacification for a couple of uptown businessmen who think they'll be hurt by a parking ban."

"But I wasn't really surprised," Mancuso added, "I anticipated this as early as last Thursday, when the Uptown Businessmen's Association petitioned the mayor for a veto... the 'front office' has always succumbed to the uptown businessmen. There was no reason to believe it wouldn't happen again."

All was not gloom under the canopies on Wall Street Monday, however. "We're very pleased," said UBA President Glenn A. Stampfle. "It was a correct decision on the mayor's part and a decision that was in the best interests of all the

In announcing Monday that he will veto the parking ban legislation, Koenig emphasized the hardship that it would place on the city's elderly shoppers, many of whom aren't physically able to walk extended distances between parking lots and stores in the uptown district.

"That's a flimsy reason," fumed Mancuso. "There's no guarantee that a senior citizen would be able to find a parking place on Wall Street anyway. That argument was nothing more than a threat by the businessmen and there isn't a shred of reason to it."

Stampfle, however, disagrees. "A good deal of our business is done with older people," he said, "on-street parking for them is both a convenience and a necessity."

Stampfle also noted that a parking ban in the Pike Plan area could force shoppers to take their business elsewhere, particularly outside the city where parking is more plentiful. If that happens, he said, the city could stand to lose valuable sales tax revenues. Koenig said Monday that 20-minute parking meters would be installed at the 30 available spaces in the Pike Plan area along Wall and North Front streets. Stampfle said strict enforcement of the parking rules should alleviate the congestion because "police would have a tool with which to work."

Seek Abductor

By Matt Spireng

MOUNT PLEASANT

State police are seeking a man who abducted a 16-year-old girl at knifepoint Monday afternoon from this western Ulster County community and drove her to Boiceville where he sexually assaulted her.

Investigators said the girl, who was not identified, had just gotten off a school bus at about 3:20 p.m. and was walking toward her home when her assailant pulled up next to her in a car, got out, and forced her into the vehicle at knifepoint.

The man then drove along Route 28 toward Boiceville, where he pulled into a wooded area near the old Boiceville railroad station. The man then assaulted the girl, forcing her to commit sodomy, police said.

After the attack, the man drove the girl back to a point near her residence, where he dropped her off and then fled, said police.

Hurley State Police RCI investigators described the girl's assailant as a white male, age 20 to 25, about 5 feet 10, of medium to stocky build with a short black hair. He was wearing tinted glasses with wire rims, police said, and carried a hunting knife. The vehicle he was driving was described as a red Volkswagen "bug."

Authorities asked anyone with possible information about the girl's assailant, his car or the incident to contact Hurley State Police 338-1702. All information will be held in confidence, police said.

because it's not the problem. It won't be effective at all," said Mancuso. The Council's majority leader, and chairman of its traffic committee, said there is no reason to believe the uptown business district won't be as congested and as inaccessible as it is now.

Part of the problem all along has been the tendency of some businessmen, and their employees, to grab the few available parking spots on Wall and North streets when they come to work in the morning, and to leave their cars there all day long. The businessmen, apparently realizing that such a practice doesn't exactly promote good customer relations, have begun a campaign to persuade UBA members and their employees to refrain from parking in the Pike Plan area.

Mancuso, meanwhile, has disputed suggestions that a parking ban in the Pike Plan area would render obsolete 30 parking meters that were purchased specifically for that purpose. He pointed out Monday that extra meters were purchased last year because, at the time, they were relatively cheap, but that they weren't intended specifically for use in

Gallo, Mabie, Martens On Dem State Committee

STONE RIDGE County Democrats, rallying behind Chairman Harold Brown's call for "unity," unanimously elected T. Robert Gallo, Roger Mabie and Frieda Martens to the State Committee, Monday night at a party convention on the Stone Ridge Campus of Ulster County Community College.

Kingston Alderman-at-Large Gallo was elected committeeman from the 101st Assembly District, succeeding Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey who did not seek reelection to the state committee.

Gallo, an elected city official in Kingston since 1963, was nominated by his long-time running mate, Mayor Francis R. Koenig. Gallo's nomination was seconded by Edward Crosby, Town of Ulster councilman.

Dr. Martens was nominated for re-election to the post she has held for the past 10 years by Agnes Loughran of Kingston. Frank C. Sass of Kingston seconded the nomination. Dr. Martens of Ruby is assistant dean at Dutchess County Community College.

Mabie of Esopus was nominated for re-election by former Esopus Supervisor George Freer. Mabie, a former Esopus supervisor, is serving his third term as state committeeman from the 99th Assembly District. His nomination was seconded by Salvatore Crimi of Lloyd.

Considering there was no opposition to any of the candidates, "the turnout was about as good as we normally get," according to Vice Chairman Rose Hogan of Kingston. The Democrats elected delegates to last night's convention, three from each of the 250 election districts in Ulster County. About half were in attendance.

Assembly Hinchey was expected to nominate Gallo but was detained in Albany by legislative business.

the uptown business area. "We wouldn't be wasting the cost of 30 meters by implementing the parking ban," said Mancuso. "They can be installed in other areas whenever and wherever they are needed."

Despite the mayor's promise of a veto, the council still may have the last word. Mancuso said nine council votes are needed to override the mayor's veto (the parking ban legislation was passed by a 9-3 vote). "Can we override the veto? I don't know," said Mancuso, "all I can do is put my faith in the individuality of each of our aldermen... I'm not going to cater to a few individuals, and I hope my colleagues won't either."

Flood Control

TOWN OF ULSTER

Members of the reactivated Lower Esopus Waterway Committee have begun a petition drive in order to enlist public support for a flood control project to be included in the Army Corps of Engineers regional flood plan.

The campaign was launched Monday night at a meeting of about 40 Lake Katrine residents who were victims of the recent flood which caused many to evacuate their homes.

They feel that a little foresight on the part of the corps could have substantially reduced the damage that raging flood waters inflicted on town properties two weeks ago.

The committee wants the corps to protect the town side of the Esopus Creek where a $2 million flood control project is planned to protect the City of Kingston. Plans call for the construction of a dike on the city side of the creek between Col. Chandler Drive and Washington Avenue.

Ulster County Legislator Richard D. Nace (R-Dist. 5) who initiated the meeting called for substantial pressure on federal, state and county officials to include the Town of Ulster in their project considerations.

Nace claims the present plans would protect only the Kingston Plaza and Dutch Village Apartments and that the committee will, possibly seek an injunction to stop the project unless an assessment is made of the needs of "all the people along the creek."

American banking really began back in 1791...

Before the Revolution, there was not a single bank in the thirteen colonies. In 1791, Alexander Hamilton, our first Secretary of the Treasury, proposed the establishment of a National Bank for the United States. There was some opposition to the plan. Thomas Jefferson and some others held that the Constitution made no provision for the chartering of banks. Nevertheless, Hamilton persuaded Washington to sign the bill and the Bank of the United States came into being. Within a year, the Bank's 6% bonds were selling abroad at well above par.

Twenty years later, along came Andrew Jackson. He was not our most sophisticated President. He hated "folding money", trusted only metallic coinage, and was, he said, afraid of banks. He managed to prevent the re-chartering of the Bank of the United States. Private banks took over the banking functions while Government gradually assumed a regulatory role, establishing such entities as the Federal Reserve to back up the banking system, and the FDIC to protect bank depositors.

Today, as a member of FDIC, Rondout Savings guarantees the safety of its depositor's money. As a local bank, managed and directed by local people, Rondout Savings serves the local community in many ways — and has done so for the past 108 years.

Patty Hearst: Fear and Abuse

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In a quiet, emotionless voice, Patricia Hearst finally told her story of life underground with the Symbionese Liberation Army — a life of fear, sexual assault and physical abuse.

The 21-year-old newspaper heiress admitted Monday she helped rob a bank, fired a machine gun at a Los Angeles sporting goods store, helped kidnap a high school student and trekked back and forth across the country with radicals without trying to escape.

She said she took part in the bank robbery and did what ever else she was told after being threatened with death "hundreds of times."

She said she was locked in dark closets for several weeks after her kidnapping, raped in one of them by William Wolfe and other SLA members, hauled from one hideout to another in a garbage can carried in a car trunk, and punched in the eye four times by William Harris.

Fear that either the SLA or FBI would kill her — especially after she watched six of her kidnapers slain in a battle with Los Angeles police on television — kept her from taking advantage of repeated chances to escape, Miss Hearst said.

Although she covered most of her life underground, she was instructed by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey not to respond to questions from Prosecutor James Browning Jr. about the planning of a bank holdup last April in Carmichael, Calif., where a woman was killed. Bailey told her to decline on grounds of possible self incrimination.

Miss Hearst made the first public disclosures about her life in captivity at a hearing on the admissibility at her bank robbery trial of evidence about events in the April 15, 1974, holdup.

The jury, absent from the courtroom during Miss Hearst's appearance, was excused again today as U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter continued the hearing. The granddaughter of newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst renounced her SLA comrades and denied ever being emotionally involved with William Wolfe, whom she described in a tape made after his death as "the gentlest, most beautiful man I've ever known" and as someone she "loved so much" because of his commitment to revolutionary goals.

Miss Hearst said her eulogy to Wolfe and five other SLA members killed in the Los Angeles battle was written by Emily Harris and that she was forced to read it.

She said SLA member Angela Atwood wrote the script for an April 18, 1974, tape in which Miss Hearst said she voluntarily took part in the bank holdup as "a soldier in the people's army" and insisted she hadn't been brainwashed.

"Now there are statements on the tape indicating that you acted voluntarily when you went to the Hibernia Bank. Was that true? Did you, in fact, act voluntarily?" Bailey asked.

"No," she replied.

Aging Proposals Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's request to Congress for election-year increases in Social Security taxes and a boost in the Medicare costs paid by elderly and disabled Americans was under attack before it left his desk.

In his first special message to Congress this year, Ford said Monday his Medicare plan would protect the aged and disabled under Medicare against "catastrophic" medical costs, and the Social Security tax rise would protect the system's financial status.

While Ford was making his appeal at a ceremony in the White House Oval Office, the previously unveiled Medicare plan was being attacked at a House Ways and Means sub-committee hearing which continues today.

"It appears to us as an obvious political maneuver to win favor with the high income elderly in presidential primaries at the expense of the nation's elderly poor and sick," said Bert Seidman, director of the AFL-CIO Social Security department.

Ford said his proposals are aimed at "helping all Americans to live in dignity, security and good health."

The Social Security proposal also drew sharp criticism from some congressional Democrats after it was proposed by Ford in his State of the Union and budget messages.

It would increase payroll taxes by three-tenths of one per cent each for workers and their bosses to shore up the system's dwindling reserves, estimated by some experts to be in danger of running out by 1980.

Gonzo Bonzo And Campaign '76

DURHAM, N.H. (UPI) — Bonzo the Chimpanzee has swung back out of Hollywood history to haunt Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary. The beast gives President Ford equal time.

Reagan made a movie called "Bedtime for Bonzo" two decades ago, a comedy about raising a chimp as a child. One of the activists in the People's Bicentennial Commission, a small but noisy band whose counter celebration includes damning big business and harassing primary candidates has taken to wearing a hairy Bonzo costume to primary rallies.

The primary primate made his debut at a Reagan appearance at Dartmouth University last week, but the candidate managed to remain the event's top banana. Sunday, at a University of New Hampshire appearance in front of 3,500 students, Ford found one of the questioners at the audience microphone was Bonzo.

Gonzo Bonzo beat his chest over a question condemning big business. Ford, like Reagan, apparently decided the only thing to do with a chimp in the crowd was to pretend chimps are people.

Ford simply remarked he could not understand one of Bonzo's words, got Bonzo to repeat it and answered the question.

Monday, trailing Ford to the university campus, Reagan visited the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity. Reagan was a Teke at Eureka College 114 years ago.

Come on, fellows, said Reagan, why did the students show "Bedtime for Bonzo" on campus this week? His fraternity brothers laughed.

The former movie star said the movie was a good comedy when made, but asked, "Is it still funny?" Because you're in it, a Teke brother said.

Reagan laughed. One of the brothers added, "And you know, governor, we've got a number of chimps in this fraternity house too."

"You know, it was tragic about old Bonzo," Reagan said. The night before he was to have collected his annual Oscar, he burned to death in a fire at Jungland.

Rich Get Still Richer on 'Incestuous' Campaign Financing

WASHINGTON, D.C. Among the 90-odd men and women who formally have registered with the Federal Election Commission as 1976 presidential candidates are a few names you'd recognize — Ford, Wallace, Reagan — and many you wouldn't recognize — Lanyhow, Zeidler and Silverstein, for instance.

In the whole bag, my favorite candidate is Sam Silverstein of Conshohocken, Pa. Sam's platform is built of planks such as these:

"Take all congressman off salary and put them on a straight commission.

"Require all doctors to publish their medical school grades in the telephone book.

"Issue postage stamps with nude photos of famous Americans to keep the Post Office out of debt."

Silverstein has a sense of humor and therefore can't be considered seriously as a presidential candidate. But, even if Sam takes himself seriously, he doesn't have a chance because Sam is poor and has no rich friends. Sam Silverstein is a sheet metal worker, presently unemployed.

Consider now presidential candidate Ellen McCormack, a Long Island housewife. There's nothing funny about her one-plank platform. She's against abortion. She's also a Roman Catholic.

You've probably never heard of Ellen McCormack either. But she has the support of certain Catholic organizations. She has friends who already have contributed $135,000 to her campaign. She therefore qualifies for federal matching funds to subsidize her campaign.

Ellen McCormack thus joins Ford, Wallace, Reagan and a handful of other presidential candidates who have demonstrated that they have enough friends and money to qualify for federal funds. The Federal Election Commission already has handed out $7 million of taxpayers' money to about 15 candidates — all the political pros you've heard of plus Ellen McCormack, whom you will hear of.

Meanwhile, Sam Silverstein and the other 75-odd registered candidates get no subsidies because they don't have enough friends and money. The catch is that before a candidate qualifies he or she must collect $100,000 from at least 400 friends.

Such is the net result of political financing "reform" that Congress began in the shadow of Watergate scandals and that the Supreme Court now has finished.

The Supreme Court upheld some of Congress' "reforms" and threw out others, but the net result is that the political pros and other candidates with rich friends are better off than ever.

The rich get richer, the poor get poorer. Or, as Chief Justice Warren Burger said in his dissenting opinion: "The system of 'matching funds' which makes a candidate's ability to amass private funds the sole criterion for eligibility for public funds . . . can put at serious disadvantage a candidate with a potentially large, widely diffused — but poor — constituency."

The "reforms" do violence to poor candidates and to third parties. The Republican and Democratic Parties and their candidates each will collect $22 million from taxpayers in 1976. If any other party qualifies for subsidies, which is doubtful, it can't collect until after the presidential election.

The rich get still richer, the poor still poorer. Or, as Justice William Rehnquist wrote in dissent, "Congress has enshrined the Republican and Democratic Parties in a permanently preferred position."

Taxpayer financing of political campaigns has been called incestuous because the parties in control of government are using federal funds to perpetuate their control. But public financing of political campaigns is even more insidiously incestuous.

Ellen McCormack and other candidates are entitled to their abortion opinions. But the Catholic Church also is against abortion and the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights strongly defends Ellen McCormack's candidacy.

She will not be elected President, but her candidacy already exerts pressures on other candidates, one of whom will be elected President. Taxpayer financing of Ellen McCormack's candidacy therefore raises grave constitutional questions concerning the separation of church and state.

Foreign Naval Power Slipping

TOKYO (UPI) — America's top admiral has made headlines in the Far East by telling the House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee that the U.S. Navy has lost control of the Sea of Japan.

According to Adm. James L. Holloway, chief of naval operations, the new top dog in the waters that separate Japan from Korea and Siberia now is the Soviet navy.

"I'd say that today, any operations we would want to conduct in the Sea of Japan would be at the sufferance of the Soviet Union," Holloway testified.

The United States won undisputed control of the Western Pacific and Sea of Japan by smashing the Japanese navy in World War II.

In the past 10 years, however, American naval supremacy in the Pacific and elsewhere has been challenged by a growing Soviet navy buildup.

Such authorities as "Jane's Fighting Ships" and Britain's Institute of Strategic Studies have pointed to the possibility of America dropping back to become the world's No. 2 naval power.

In October, a Tokyo newspaper reported Japan's Self-Defense Agency was concerned over the growing Soviet naval might.

The Tokyo Shimbun quoted Japanese defense sources as guessing Soviet naval strength in the Pacific at 753 vessels of about 1.2 million tons combined weight.

American strength was estimated at 60 ships of all kinds weighing in at around 740,000 tons.

The U.S. Seventh (Far East) Fleet, which Holloway formerly commanded, deployed three aircraft carriers to none for the Soviets.

However, the Russians were said to have 30 nuclear powered submarines in the Pacific compared to five for the United States.

Both Japan and South Korea are America's military allies. Some 38,000 American troops are stationed in South Korea. Another 55,000 are based in Japan, including Okinawa.

The shock effect of Holloway's words was greatest in South Korea. In effect, he warned that if the unsettled 1950-53 Korean war broke out again, the sea approaches to South Korea might be dominated by the Soviet Union, an ally of North Korea.

In Tokyo, the Asahi newspaper quoted Japanese defense sources as saying the Sea of Japan "is regularly used by the Soviets as a practice sea."

"Soviet warships pass through the Tsushima and Tsugaru Straits (the Japan Sea's main entrances) all the time," the newspaper said. "In contrast, the U.S. Seventh Fleet held maneuvers in the Sea of Japan only once in 1975."

The Japanese also looked for more requests from Washington to build up their own modest naval strength. Rep. Robert Wilson (R-Calif.), No. 2 man on the House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee, asked aloud if the time had come for America to "put pressure on Japan to build up her navy and take over the job of guaranteeing her own sea lanes."

Differing Interpretations of the Campaign Finance Law

Author's Note: The Democratic and Republican National Committees are going their separate ways in interpreting the campaign finance laws.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (KFS) — The Republican National Committee and the Democratic National Committee have been interpreting the campaign contribution restrictions just upheld by the Supreme Court in dramatically different ways.

The result is that while both are officially neutral in their party's contest for the presidential nomination, the Democratic party has been far more helpful to its candidates than has the Republican party.

The Republicans have a stickier internal problem than do the Democrats, since one of the candidates happens to be the incumbent President. The National Committee has reacted publicly by offering all its services equally, including its fund-raising lists, to both candidates — for a price.

Cost of Services

The Republicans asked the Federal Election Commission whether the committee's services could be considered "contributions in kind" and therefore fall within the $5,000 donation to which such bodies are limited per candidate. The FEC did not issue an advisory opinion, but did reply informally that such services were indeed included.

On that basis, the GOP decided that it would charge for any services it provided either the President or former Gov. Ronald Reagan, and that it would print nothing but hard news about both candidates in its regular publication, "First Monday," lest any puffery also be considered a "contribution in kind."

This strict attitude, Reagan advisers complain, is merely a means of denying Reagan technical help that would mean more to him than it does to the President, who has a whole White House support system at his disposal. Consequently, relations between the Republican National Committee and the Reagan camp are very strained. Reagan has shown no interest in buying the RNC's fund-raising letter.

The President has not yet paid for any RNC services either, although a spokesman for his campaign said there had been discussions about how to set a fair market value.

The Democratic National Committee, on the other hand, has been providing all sorts of information and services to any Democratic candidate who asked for them, free of charge. All the candidates have asked for, and received, the committee's basic fund-raising list as well as its contributor list from the yearly telethons. In addition, the DNC has supplied without cost delegate selection information, demographic research data, target media lists and polling information.

The DNC has never asked the Federal Election Commission for advice and merely adopted the attitude on its own that its services were noncommercial and of unascertainable value and therefore not "contributions in kind."

Typical of Confusion

This difference in interpretation of the law between the Republicans and Democrats is typical of the confusion that has surrounded the complicated reforms enacted by Congress in 1974.

"As a general rule, any services rendered by the national committees are contributions in kind and fall within the limitations. A mailing list, for instance, is valuable help to a candidate's fund-raising," said David Fisk, an FEC spokesman.

"Absurd," replied Mark Segal, DNC executive director. "The campaign law is meant to address the inequities of Watergate, not control our Xerox machine. We aren't commercial and we aren't making contributions by performing normal party functions, so long as we perform them for everyone equally, which we are doing."

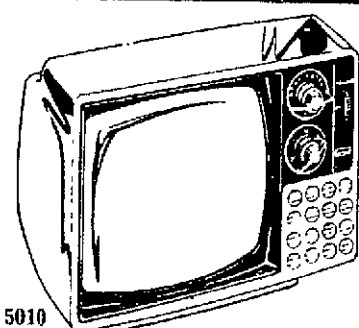

In reality, there does not appear to be very much the FEC can do about the problem of party services in any event. It only has the power to write a letter and ask for voluntary compliance, if it should go ahead and issue a formal opinion. And if Congress does not pass legislation meeting the Supreme Court's objections to the commission, it will be stripped of even that minor authority in 30 days.

Ironie Primary Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Irony is no stranger to politics, but it is hard to recall a more striking series of bittersweet coincidences than are coming together this year in Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin Democratic party is one of the most militantly reformist state political organizations in the country. At recent Democratic national conventions, the Wisconsin delegates have been in the forefront of efforts to strengthen party rules designed to open its ranks to all comers and have supported efforts to enforce reforms once they are enacted.

Now it is the Wisconsin Democratic party that is feeling the pinch of reform. One of the rules adopted by the national party in 1974 to govern the selection of convention delegates requires that the process be limited to Democrats. Wisconsin has no party registration and prides itself in an "open" primary system that lets Democrats vote in Republican primaries, or vice versa, without restraint.

The national party commission charged with enforcing the new rules found that Wisconsin's presidential primary, to be held on April 6 this year, does not meet the requirement of "Democrats only" in delegate selection. It said the Wisconsin Democrats, who control both houses of the state legislature, either had to change the primary or design a new delegate selection system.

Therein is the second irony. Up to the start of its current session, the legislature has refused to touch the wide open Wisconsin primary law, leaving the party with the option of using a caucus and convention procedure for choosing delegates.

But it was the caucus system — in practice, party meetings usually attended by only a few persons — that Wisconsin dumped 71 years ago when it became the first state in the nation to adopt the "reform" presidential primary for selecting national convention delegates.

That isn't all. The reason the national party objects to the wide open Wisconsin primary is that Republicans, independents and other non-believers can use it to distort the will of the Democratic rank and file.

It is an open secret in the state that "cross over" voting has been used many times by members of one party to support the weakest candidate of the opposition in hopes of making general election victory easier.

But this year, after a long series of no contests and hollow GOP presidential primaries that invited party members to cross over to the Democratic primary to make mischief, there is a real battle on the Republican side. And, with the Democratic primary apparently to be relegated to beauty contest status, the temptation in 1976 will be for the Democrats to vote in the Ford/Reagan confrontation.

Congratulations Mayor

Mayor Francis R. Koenig has revealed his intention to veto the recent Common Council legislation banning parking in the Pike Plan area . . . and the Freeman congratulates him for it.

We fully realize that there are parking problems in that area, as well as throughout the city. We have presented stories, photos and editorials on this subject many times. We would hope that the problem can be resolved once cooler heads prevail.

Certainly there are parking privileges in that area that are constantly abused. And, some of the merchants who complained loudly and bitterly about the recent legislation are reported to be the worst offenders.

However, this legislation would have been of great detriment to the merchants and shoppers who treat the Pike Plan with the utmost respect. After all, it only takes one or two mis-parked cars to foul an entire line of law-biding traffic.

It would be nice though, if the City could find some way of making a mall of the Pike Plan. It would take a lot of work and organization, but, if it were possible and practical, the uptown shopping area would easily become a showplace of the Mid-Hudson Valley.

Front Page Story

Dear Editor,

Congratulations on your front-page story about the three engineering officials of General Electric who quit their jobs because they believed that nuclear energy is a profound threat to man.

For more than two and a half years, increasing numbers of individuals and groups in the Hudson Valley have issued similar warnings about the hazards of this technology. Many times, in confrontations with individuals and groups which supported atomic energy, we have been called "uninformed", "emotional", and "alarmists", despite the numerous scientists whom we quoted in defense of our position. We of the Hudson Valley Citizens Watch on Nuclear Safety are particularly pleased, therefore, to have our worst fears vindicated in public by still more experts.

It is most significant that, in addition to having among them a total of 54 years of experience in the nuclear field, these men with families to support believe the danger inherent in nuclear technology is so great that they voluntarily gave up substantial yearly salaries and forfeited any future possibility of ever again working in a profession to which they had devoted their adult lives and abilities.

We believe the words of men of such rare integrity must be carefully studied by every resident of the Hudson Valley in view of PASNY's plans to site an atomic facility at Cementon and of the proposed siting of four nuclear plants at Lloyd-Esopus, in addition to the three reactors already located at Indian Point (most if not all of their electricity destined for New York City's subways and skyscrapers). If they are convinced by these words, we hope that every citizen, every Town Board, every valley County Legislature will make known to Governor Carey, to PASNY, and to the Public Service Commission their objections to the use of the Hudson area as a nuclear super-highway.

Yours truly,
Ned Lebac
Secretary
New Paltz

Dedicated Workers

Dear Editor,

I am sure that some of your readers are familiar with the dedicated work of the volunteer fire departments in the Hudson Valley. But for those who are not, perhaps this letter will serve a useful purpose.

I live in the Blue Mountain Park area of Saugerties and, of course, can speak only first hand of the work of the Centerville Fire Department, which serves this area.

During the last week of January when the deluge came following the January thaw, these men did an incredible job. For most of the week these firemen, all neighbors, spent the major portion of their time away from the regular work bailing out people with serious and sometimes dangerous flooding problems in their homes.

In my particular case, no less than five visits were made, visits which sometimes lasted from four to eight hours. How they were able to spend all night bailing out a neighbor's cellar or crawl space in miserable freezing temperatures and then put in a full day's work on their regular jobs I do not know. I do know that many of them must have seen their wives and families very little for that extended period.

Perhaps the most impressive thing to me, besides their selfless dedication, was their genuine concern with finding the structural cause of the flooding and their willingness to go not just an extra mile to correct it but quite a few beyond that.

I know that I and my family are deeply indebted to Chief Warren Benz, Captain Roger Brayley, Fireman Jim Taylor, Allan Proper, Bob Kleeman, and Assistant Chief Phil Dugan. And there were others whose names I regret I did not get.

They were all simply great. I wouldn't have believed such a generosity of time and spirit was possible in this day and age if I hadn't seen it . . . and I SAW it. I just couldn't have begun to pay anyone for the hours spent and the expertise they brought to the job.

It has been proved to me that our volunteer firemen are undoubtedly one of the finest human resources we have in the Hudson Valley.

Most sincerely,
JAMES F. McCONNOCHIE

No Bearing

Dear Editor,

Thanks for space in the paper to address one, Mr. James Thomas who rebutted me and challenged me for an answer to my articles, "Stiff Sentence for Drugs" on Jan. 27, 1976.

Dear Mr. James Thomas,

Your rebuttal with reference to my article in the Kingston Freeman was categorically your right of free speech, but three words that you used were impertinent, improper, insulting, unethical and sarcastic and in bad taste and had no bearing on the subject matter—as—hypocrite, fool and teetotaler.

Rather than being verbose at present, I am urging you to fortify yourself with the facts as to the impact—psychological and physiological use of Marijuana, and other drugs.

"The Health Pamphlet by the Prudential Life Insurance Co., "Questions and Answers on Drug Abuse and its dangers."

After reading the research information ask yourself who is the fool—me—or the user.

Sir, even if one disagrees with another they can be diplomatic, polite as gentlemen should be to each other instead of insulting.

Sincerely,
EDWIN J. HIGBY
Kingston, N.Y.

P.S. The theory today is if you can't lick them—join them.

New School Out

Dear Editor,

Would you be kind enough to publish this in the editorial column?

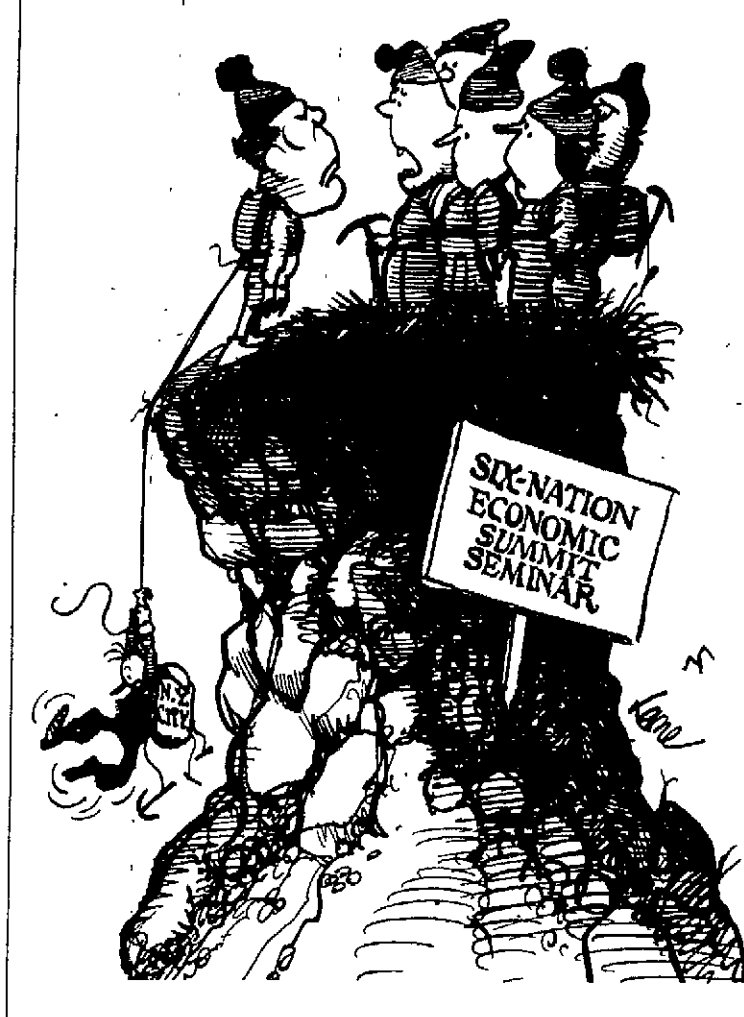

The taxpayers cannot afford a new high school. It's as simple as that. At a time when the economy is at an all time low plus the drastic cuts in state aid to education, the beleaguered taxpayers are in desperation. Furthermore a good education is not dependent on fancy surroundings. Abraham Lincoln is a classic example of that.

So let's stop making waves and instead make plans to accept the best alternatives. Many of the same people who are pushing so hard for a new high school will not be around to pay for it. We natives will.

Our sincere admiration goes to school board member, Mr. Richard Skala for having the courage of his convictions and honoring his promises to the taxpayers.

Sincerely,
M. VAN ETTEN
Lake Katrine, N.Y.

'A Column By Me'

Occasionally a newspaper carrying my words will mistakenly ascribe them to Mr. Art Buchwald, even furnishing a picture of him (most recently this brought from Buchwald a note, "Bill: how do you manage to stay so young?"). I wish to record that what follows is not a column by Art Buchwald. It is a column by me, WFB, and it features a communication by the Attorney General of the State of Wisconsin. So far as I know, it is not a hoax. The communication is entitled, "Employment Application Form Questions Which May Lead to Discrimination."

The communication is designed for employers in Wisconsin who desire not to break the law, especially Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which some of us will remember as the law Senator Barry Goldwater voted against on the grounds that it was unconstitutional. Perhaps it isn't unconstitutional, but it is certainly a lot of other things.

The Attorney General's office wishes every Wisconsinite to know that "When he inquires into any of (the enumerated factors)—i.e., in interviewing or soliciting information from a prospective employee—he is running a risk of encouraging unlawful discrimination." This is so even when you don't act on the information—the mere asking of the questions might tend "to discourage women or minorities from even applying for jobs."

Here's a list of what you can't ask.

1. "Age? Date of birth?" You might find yourself violating the laws that prohibit age discrimination.

2. "Arrest?" Absolutely not. An arrest is no indication "whatsoever" of guilt, and "historically minorities have suffered proportionately more arrests than others."

3. "Available for Saturday and Sunday work?" No. You see, some people "belong to religious sects that prohibit work on Saturday or Sunday." For some reason, the Attorney General appears to show no concern for people who belong to religious sects that prohibit work on Wednesdays; or, for that matter, to sects that discourage any work at all.

4. "Children under 18? Number of children? Age of children? What arrangements will you make for care of minor children?" No sirree. "The purpose of these questions is to explore what the employer believes to be a common source of absenteeism and tardiness. But why explore this area in such an indirect way, and in a way which applies only to women for all practical purposes?" The Civil Rights Act of 1964 forgot to make men mothers.

6. "Convictions?" "Probably unlawful. See Carter v. Gallagher, 451 F.2d 315 (8th Cir. 1971). This is because some minority groups in our society have conviction records substantially in excess of the average . . ."

7. "Credit Record? (Charge account? Own your own home? Own your own furniture? Own a car?)" No. "Because minority persons are far poorer on the average than whites, consideration of these factors has an adverse effect . . ."

8. "Eyes? Hair?" "Eye color and hair color are not related to the performance of any job and may serve to indicate an employee's race or religion." What if you want a natural blonde to advertise a lipstick that goes with natural blonde hair?

10. "Friends or relatives working for us?" No. You may have a disproportionate number of non-female non-minority friends.

11. "Garnishment record?" " . . . minorities suffer wage garnishment substantially more often than do whites."

12. "Height? Weight?" No. Such questions might have "the effect of excluding above-average percentages of women and members of certain nationality groups." Milesians and Hottentots, one supposes.

Numbers 14-18 are anti-sexist, pro-scribing, "maiden name?" "Marital status?" "Mr., Miss, or Mrs.?" (" . . . simply another way of asking the applicant's sex. . .")

The list closes with 21, "widowed, divorced or separated?" "Recent statistics show that many more black than white persons are either widowed, divorced or separated. . ."

What I would like to do, if I lived in Wisconsin, is file a citizen's suit against the Attorney General for sponsoring a document that is itself sexist and racist in its implications. I would have him tried and convicted, and sentenced to eat his communication, all six pages of it, in public. One wonders what questions one would be permitted to ask a prospective juror at the Attorney General's trial. If you asked, "Are you bright?" and the answer was affirmative, then clearly the AG would not be tried by a jury of his peers.

Pilfered Pennies Case

WASHINGTON — The strange case of the pilfered pennies helped to send earnest Mary Brooks, the harassed director of the U.S. Mint, to the hospital last November with nervous exhaustion. She is still quietly recuperating.

Many pressures contributed to the strain that has kept her away from her office for more than three months. But the incident that upset her the most, according to friends, was the mysterious disappearance of a dozen aluminum pennies on Capitol Hill.

The experimental coins were delivered to the Senate and House banking committees for the members to inspect. That's the last the authorities saw of most of the pennies, which are worth thousands of dollars apiece to anyone brash enough to risk federal prosecution. Within a few years, their individual value may be as high as $100,000.

Poor Ms. Brooks was responsible for the rare coins. She had to get them back or report them stolen. But it would have been awkward for her to accuse Members of Congress of theft. She would have been obliged to investigate the very committee members who oversee the U.S. Mint.

We published the story of the missing coins on April 21. This put Ms. Brooks on the spot, but she was unable to solve the disappearance. Meanwhile, the lightfingered legislators still haven't returned the valuable coins.

The embattled Mint director arranged for hospitalization last November and disappeared as quietly as the pennies. Her friends say she hopes to be back in her office in a few days on a limited basis.

Another problem that weighed heavily upon her was a monumental coinage study, which may result in dollar coins, two-cent pieces and other new mintings.

She had argued that two-cent pieces would stop vending machine operators from escalating prices five cents at a time. The dollar coins not only have become realistic as they diminish in value, but they will far outlast paper currency, she contended.

All a spokesman at the Mint would say was that he expected the boss back in the office "in a short time."

Footnote: In an earlier column, we reported that Ms. Brooks had tried to block the minting of 65,000 experimental aluminum pennies. This was disputed by Coin World, the coin collectors' bible.

We not only have secret Mint documents which back up our story, but we spoke personally to Ms. Brooks who confirmed that the minting had been carried out by her aides without her knowledge. Apparently someone slipped Coin World a wooden nickel.

KENNEDY'S COOL: Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., keeping cool in a crisis, recently saved a young woman from possible decapitation.

It happened on January 22. Carol Chealander, a professional staffer for the Senate Republican Policy Committee, stepped into a crowded elevator on Capitol Hill.

Before the pretty, 26-year-old brunette could get all the way inside, the powerful doors closed around her neck.

The elevator operator froze. The passengers, aghast, stood by helplessly — with one exception. Senator Kennedy looked up from his reading and calmly told the elevator operator: "Let go of the handle."

But the panicked operator didn't relax his grip even after Kennedy repeated the injunction. All the while, the continuing pressure from the doors was slowly crushing Ms. Chealander's neck.

Then Kennedy pushed through the crowded elevator and knocked the operator's hand off the control. The elevator doors sprang open, and Ms. Chealander stumbled inside. "If Senator Kennedy hadn't kept his head," she told us, "I'd be dead."

As it is, she has been out of work with major neck injuries since the accident. Kennedy helped her find medical care, incidentally, referring her to the same physician who had treated his brothers and himself for injuries.

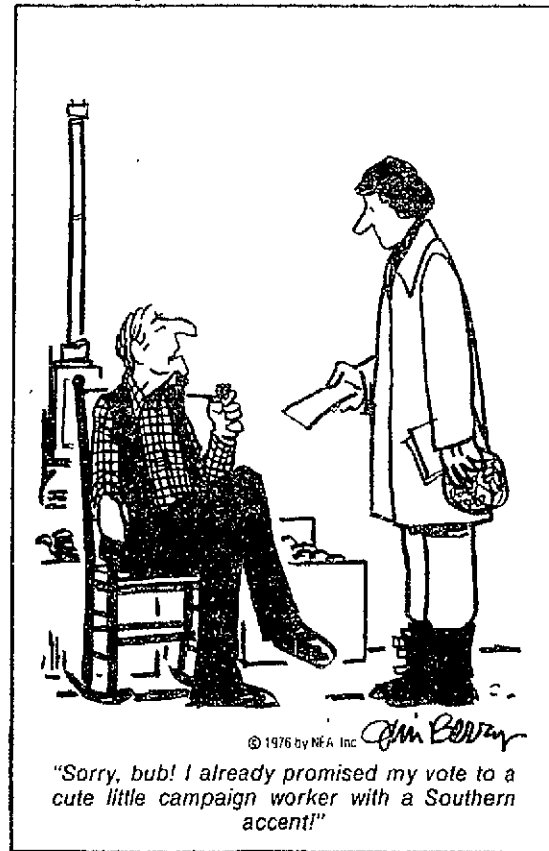

The Senator has avoided publicizing his good deed in a manner uncommon to politicians. When we called his office to ask about the incident, aides confirmed the report but told us: "The Senator doesn't think it is appropriate to comment on it."

MEAT STEW: Not all bureaucrats learned the lessons of Watergate. When a federal takeover of meat inspection programs loomed, New York state meat inspections director L.R. Crowell had this advice for his staff in a private memo: "Upon receipt of this memo, please start destroying regional files . . . anything of a confidential nature should first be torn up."

He ordered destruction of all "investigative materials" and "quarantine herd and flock files. Do not turn any regional files over to the USDA (U.S. Department of Agriculture)", he warned.

Reached for comment, Crowell said the files were legally destroyed and the USDA didn't want them anyway. "What is this, a cross examination?" he asked.

Richardson Makes Big News

WASHINGTON — The big news in Washington last week was not that Daniel Patrick Moynihan resigned, but that Elliot Richardson decided to stay on as secretary of commerce for the rest of the month of February.

As everyone knows, Mr. Richardson has not remained at one position in the government for too long. He has been secretary of health, education and welfare, secretary of defense, attorney general, ambassador to the Court of St. James and was sworn in last week as secretary of commerce.

While most people send the President a letter when they resign and receive a letter from the President regretting their departure, Mr. Richardson turned the tables and wrote the President saying he planned to remain at his post.

Here is the exchange of letters between the President and Secretary Richardson.

"Dear Mr. President: I am happy to tell you that after a week as secretary of commerce I intend to stay. My reasons for this decision are personal. I need the job.

"You have always treated me fairly and supported me during these trying days when the Commerce Department has been under fire from all sides. I hope you are satisfied with the job I did during the last week and the decisions I made over the weekend. It has been a pleasure working in your Administration and with you personally.

"While my reasons for staying on are my own, I will be frank and say that I discussed them with my wife. She thought I might do some good in the private sector but urged me to stay on in my present position because of the security involved. My children also played a part in the decision. Every time they went to school and someone asked them what their father did for a living, they said they couldn't remember.

"I have assured them that, at least until the election, they could say I was secretary of commerce. So, as you can see, my decision to remain in your Cabinet has not come about lightly. It was discussed at home and with close personal friends, and the conclusion was unanimous that I stay where I am.

"I want you to know, Mr. President, that although I will remain at my post as secretary of commerce, I will always be available for consultation and advice whenever you wish it. By staying in the government, I have not lost my interest in the affairs of state, and I hope you will call on me for future service to my country. "During the past week, you and Mrs. Ford have both been most generous to Anne and myself, and we thank you for it. This is not goodbye but, as the French say, 'au revoir,' which translates into 'until we meet again.'"

Your obedient Servant,
Elliot Richardson."

This was the President's reply. "Dear Elliot: It was with extreme pleasure that I received your letter announcing your decision to remain as secretary of commerce. No one has done as much against such formidable odds as you have during your first week as a Cabinet officer. Your country owes you a debt of gratitude for the great service you have performed in one of the most difficult roles any American has been asked to undertake. Without you, the Commerce Department would have been a shambles.

"What I have admired about, Elliot, is that you have always been a team player; and the last seven days have proved that once I give you the ball, you can run with it.

"Please accept all my good wishes for the future, and, on behalf of Betty and myself, the best of luck wherever your travels as secretary of commerce may take you.

Sincerely,
Gerald R. Ford
President of the United States"

Kingston Had a Ball!

The Kingston Hospital Auxiliary painted the town red, white, and blue this past Saturday when the strains of Charlie Lee's orchestra played for the annual dance.

The ballroom of the Governor Clinton Hotel was transformed by the genius of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Seeger and their committee. Bunting and eagles, flags, and a star spangled musical score of the opening bars of "America, the Beautiful," the theme of the gala, there was a miniature construction of the Grand Canyon, and chandeliers honored our conquest of space.

On Monday morning, all those who had attended smiled, misty-eyed, and agreed, "It was a lovely affair."

Peter Kramer of Malden-on-Hudson danced away with the door prize: a bicentennial weekend trip for two, donated by Kingston Travel Agency.

Mrs. Thomas Buckley, dance chairman, thanked the community for their excellent support of the benefit.

Their Golden Anniversary

Though their glow belies it, the couple above were married fifty years ago yesterday. They are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Steward of 30 Madison Ave. Kingston. Forty friends and relations celebrated the momentous day at Holiday Inn on Sunday at a party given by their children, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Steward, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Steward of Chatham, N.Y. The Stewards exchanged their vows before the Rev. Ignatius Bialdygo at the Polish Congregational Church in Kingston in 1926. They made their home at the Steward homestead farm which later became the Wiltwyck Country Club. Mr. Steward served as Sexton for the Old Dutch Church, and worked as Maintenance Supervisor at Britts until his retirement in 1971. The couple have been blessed with seven grandchildren.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, 72, Talks of Then and Now

By Marian Christy

WASHINGTON "Don't let the coffee get cold," chides Majority Leader of the Senate, Mike Mansfield of Montana, who offers a plate of home-made cookies before dashing off for a roll call.

Energetic Mansfield is the son of an Irish immigrant who worked as a hotel porter in New York. Today, at 72, he is a long-time political personality with a prominence for conspicuous humility.

His simply stated homespun philosophy pares down the art of living to its basic components:

"The older you get," he says, "the more you realize that you're a transient being, just passing through. Somehow, when you become the benefactor of good things, you go your way thanking God for his cordialities."

Sen. Mansfield, a tall man in an elegant navy blue suit, once worked in the copper mines of Butte. At that time he had only an eighth-grade education, had lied about his age (14) to serve in the armed forces of World War I, and had lived a poverty-stricken life based on no indoor plumbing and a once-a-week bath.

At various times during his 33 years in Congress, Mansfield has been urged to run for President. He's come a long way.

About the job he has shunned:

"As a senator," he says, "you have no time for a personal life. Actually, it's remarkable to sit down and consider that you've lived a political life all these years and you've got family that can still stand you after all the time you just weren't around. The presidency would rob your freedom altogether."

On the acquisition of superpower: "Power is an illusion. Those who think of themselves as powerful people are probably on the decline. Long ago, I learned that it's the job that's important — not the man. Everything in life is temporary."

Sen. Mansfield, a soft-spoken gentleman who reminisces about his rags-to-riches-and-power rise, says his career is based primarily on the nebulous element of "luck."

He says: "In politics, you don't get by on your smile, your education, your charm or your fine clothes. What gets you through are the important, long-standing relationships you develop with your constituency. Really, I've been terribly lucky. I know a large slice of the 700,000 people I serve in Montana — and they know me.

"There's a friendship between us. Right now, as always, there are people in Montana who are smarter and maybe more efficient than me. But destiny, fate, Lady Luck — however you label that force — has created just the right combination to make my career happen."

The Mike Mansfields have been married for 44 years. When the senator speaks to his wife, Maureen, his eyes glow. A string of superlatives spills into the conversation: "She's the most remarkable... She's the most loving... She's the most supportive... She's the most brilliant..."

Mike and Maureen — sometimes called "the M-M's" by friends because of the ripe candy-sweetness they exude for each other — met through Maureen's older sister who was a student at the University of Montana when the senator was studying there.

"I didn't attend high school," says the senator. "But I was a veteran so the school made concessions to accept me as a campus dweller. Well, one day Maureen came on campus with her sister. We met. She sized me up. For both of us, it was love at first sight."

When Sen. Mansfield was in his senior year, the Mansfields got married. He had a job offer but, at the last minute, it "fell through." Maureen cashed in her life insurance so that he could have enough tuition money to finish college.

"Jobs were scarce then," he says. "But, then, a buck was worth a good deal more than it is today. In desperation, I went to my school advisor. He said the best he could do was to get me a job teaching social sciences for $1,400 a year," says Mansfield, who eventually became a professor of Far Eastern Studies at the university.

In 1940, at Maureen's urging, he ran for Congress and was defeated. It was Maureen, with her unfaltering faith in his potential, who gave him the "courage and spiritual stamina" to try again. In 1942 he ran — and won.

On confidence — which he exudes:

"Well, frankly, deep inside I don't feel all that confident. I think all people are basically insecure. You're never sure that the decisions you make are the right ones. But, in your mind and heart, you have to believe the moves you make are right."

"On the other hand, if you're really confident, you don't hesitate to consider the opinion of the person at the opposite pole. Once you come to grips with the fact that you're merely a human and therefore subject to error of judgment — your confidence is strengthened."

More on confidence: "It's really at a peak when you move within the framework of your limitations. In the final analysis, confidence is knowing what you're not — not only what you are."

Sen. Mansfield, the man who helped initiate the Watergate investigation and led the successful fight for the 18 year olds' vote, has known several presidents well.

About President Gerald Ford: "Well, frankly, he's too quick with the vetoes. I think he travels around the country too much and obviously he has been in dangerous situations. "But he's an open man, candid, conservative and pleasant. At least you know where the moves you make are with him. That's refreshing."

On former President Richard Nixon: "We used to have breakfast together once or twice a month. Actually, we were both insecure about each other. We never seemed to talk about matter of substance. We had a good 'relationship' — not a close one."

The senator, who is said to have no known political enemies in Washington, says the dwindling links with presidents are "somewhat" his fault. "I'm not much of a telephone person," he admits. "And actually, when you're a senator, the job comes before all else — even friendships."

When he recapitulates his career, does he have regrets that he has had little time to develop friendships of depth. Mansfield says his most poignant remorse concerns his London-based daughter, Anne Marris, 36, who's married to a professor at Cambridge University.

"Anne is my only child. She has always been very loving to me. I'm just so sorry that we didn't have one or two more children to keep her company. Anne has never been interested in running in a political race. We used to talk about that possibility but she recognizes all the pomp and circumstances of the political world."

"When you get right down to it, Washington is just a place where government is the No. 1 business and ordinary people from a cross-section of the country are here to do a job."

'My Standards For Parenting Are So High . . . I Couldn't Measure Up'

The new president of the National Organization for Non Parents will never be a father.

That's precisely what the Chataanooga, Tenn., native had in mind when he had himself fixed at the age of 28—five years ago.

Naturally, Stephen A. Keese isn't suggesting vasectomy for all men.

But he wants men and women to understand that a child-free lifestyle is perfectly respectable.

I ran into Keese 33 at the annual convention of the National Organization for Non Parents the other day in New York, nowhere were there down with children signs—something a nonmember might expect.

Rather than having children, the organization's members believe in responsible parenthood. During a workshop with a psychiatrist leader, married couples openly searched their souls and sought guidance on the question—Am I parent material?

Carole Goldman, the group's executive director at national headquarters in Baltimore, Md., is the mother of two.

We want people to know they can choose parenthood or non parenthood, Keese said.

We advocate freedom of reproductive choice within a framework of personal social and environmental consciousness.

"This cannot truly exist in a prejudiced cultural context, where parenthood is glorified and non parenthood too little understood."

The organization is fighting pronatalism. This is social pressure on non parents. Pressure to encourage reproduction. This policy that exalts the status of parenthood.

Non parents find their choice to remain child-free often raises eyebrows among friends, relatives and even strangers, Goldman said.

They are subjected to a constant barrage of "why don't you have children?" type questions.

Keese, Harvard graduate and Peace Corps veteran, made the decision to go through life the non parent way a couple of years before he had the operation.

I decided I didn't want to have any children, he said. The things I wanted to accomplish in my lifetime couldn't be done while being a good parent.

My standards for parenting are so high I don't think I could measure up to them. I also had this feeling that the world was already overpopulated and I'd better practice what I preach.

The National Organization for Non Parents came into being four years ago. Some of its 2,000 members across the nation had taken the step that Keese took. But they are in the minority.

Bearded and handsome, Keese now makes his living at the Association for Voluntary Sterilization. At the time he decided to have a vasectomy, he was farming in the State of Espirito Santo (Holy Spirit State) in Brazil—about 300 miles north of Rio.

He had stayed in the country after his Peace Corps tour there ended. Later he came back to the United States, taking up residence in Milton, Mass., and New York City.

There were four in my family," he said. "I had a relatively happy childhood. When I made the decision to have a vasectomy, I didn't feel I must confront my parents with it."

"It was amusing when I was elected to national office and called my dad. I thought it was time to tell him I'd had a vasectomy some five years ago."

He said he knew that and had told all his friends up and down the street in Chataanooga.

"Do you like children," I asked Keese.

"I like some children some of the time—which I observe is true of most people," he said.

What is so important about his blueprint for spending his life—So very special that Keese would spurn parenthood? Permanently.

"I want to make the world a better place in which to live," he said. "That covers a lot of territory obviously."

I think it's better done directly than through one's children. Doing it directly is more efficient, more effective.

Keese doesn't expect the nonparent organization to grow at a terrific rate.

We're not dealing with a group of joiners, he said. "People are members for a while and then move on. What we are interested in is tremendous growth in awareness—that there is a choice, and it's not selfish to be child-free."

"The last figures from the Census Bureau showed a dramatic rise in the percentage of married women between 18 and 39 who had indicated their intention to have no children. It was 42 per cent of the bracket. That's an almost 50 per cent increase in two years."

The National Organization for Non Parents budget for the new year is $110,000—private contributions and money from foundations.

"That's better than double the $45,000 budget the year before," Keese said.

"We have three paid staff and one consultant. A large part of what was given to us for this year will go to the Public Media Center in San Francisco for a campaign to raise the public's awareness of the choice for a child-free lifestyle."

"This would be to balance the pronatalist pressure. The media reinforce the pressure. Television shows generally imply that happy families are those with children.

"When a quiz show contestant announces that she is the mother of many children, hearty applause follows. And the birth rate on daytime soap operas seems only slightly less than that of Latin America."

"Women's magazines present the same message, headlining—'The Fulfillment of Motherhood,' 'The Miracles of Birth,' and the like. 'Advertisers are sometimes accused of exploiting sex to sell merchandise but the exploitation of adorable infants and children to sell unrelated products is just as serious.'"

The non-parents group believes that much of the pronatalist bias will begin to disappear only when society is made aware that it exists and when non-parents are accorded full social approval.

"It is often regarded as selfish for the child-free to choose a lifestyle which offers them personal contentment," Keese said.

"Yet their choice benefits all of us, and holds out the hopes of a better and more spacious world."

I asked Bachelor Keese if marriage was in his future.

"I don't see any reason to get married," he said. "I think it's probably a mistake in most cases. People don't need to get married in most cases."

Dr. Robert Gould, Professor of Psychiatry, New York Medical College, spoke out on "parent material" at the non-parents' annual meeting.

"Once you get into this (parenting) you can't get out of it," Gould said. "It's worse than marriage if it's not for you. At least if it doesn't work you can get out of a bad marriage."

"With babies, with children you are really stuck if it doesn't work. Some parents have to fake it."

Considering how really stuck, one should spend a lot of time thinking about having children. Will it enrich your life or make it a hell?

"I cannot tell you how many lives have been absolutely ruined. Children become neurotic. And it costs a lot. Psychiatrists cost a lot."

"I've seen lives turned inside out and backwards."

Gould said it all boils down to deciding—What is right for me?

The psychiatrist said change is an ingredient in life and it could be perfectly valid for a couple to follow a lifestyle of non parenting now and some years later have children.

"Having children gives many meaning to life," he said.

He was asked if being good at raising dogs would mean you're good parent material. "Not necessarily so—especially if you spend too much attention and emotion on the animals."

The honorary board of sponsors of the National Organization for Non Parents includes actress Shirley MacLaine, General Motors heir Stewart R. Mott and Alvin Toffler, futurologist who wrote "Future Shock."

Healthy Glands Keep Your Body Young

Number Thirteen of a Series

Ben Bald treats his thinning hair to a series of expensive scalp treatments while Susie Sallow spends plenty of hard earned money for creams and lotions. Both believe that hair and skin can be nourished from the outside. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

A youthful appearance begins inwardly—with healthy, properly nourished endocrine glands.

Before my efforts to help you recover your lost youth can progress any further, you must realize that endocrine glands are the dictators which determine whether or not your all out campaign to look and feel younger will succeed or fail.

Your glands must be nourished with the proper food elements or you can't depend on them to lend you much aid in the effort to regain your vanishing youth.

If a part of the human body could be described as temperamental, then I would say the word was coined to fit your endocrine glands and their hair trigger sensitivity. Needs Nourishment.

They hold unlimited power over every human being keeping one person young and vigorous despite the passing years, condemning another to a premature old age and thrusting a third into a morass of depressed thoughts and nagging ill health.

The names of these glandular despots are pituitary, thyroid, adrenals, pancreas, thymus, pineal, parathyroids and gonads.

How do these eight glands hold such vast control over your life? Hormones are the answer—a word that has become headline news in recent years.

When it came time to name secretions of these all powerful endocrine glands, some imaginative scientist chose the appropriate Greek verb. Hormon meaning excite. For that in brief is the intended function of all hormones—to excite your bodily organs into performing at maximum efficiency so you may possess all the vitality, all the magnetism, all the radiance of a healthy, happy person.

No person can say with authority that any one of these glands is the "most important" because each one has its work so closely tied in with the other seven that a slight upset in one member of the endocrine family reacts almost immediately on the efficiency of the others. What one gland does, or does not do, is registered without fail in the entire clan's activities.

The only way you can tell when your glands are not functioning up to par is when you begin noticing the effects of their suffering. These effects often put in an appearance in spots quite remote from the seat of the original trouble.

For instance, the two adrenal glands (each about as large as a bean) are suspended one above each kidney. When these adrenal glands are not behaving as they should, the skin becomes dark and sallow, with deep lines. Note, please, that they don't advertise their upset by a pain in the small of the back where they are located.

Vibrancy of Youth

Let's consider the glands which perhaps should rank first in your effort to retain the appearances and sensations of youth.

What qualities or attributes make people say of a certain man or woman "He (or she) is so young for his (her) age?"

My first answer would be sexual vibrancy—for in these two words are contained the confidence, inward feeling of power, energy, vitality, enthusiasm, mental alertness, sense of attractiveness, assurance, stamina and radiant glow which are gifts to the young of any age.

The hormones secreted by the gonads exert a tremendous influence on your physical health, as well as on your ability to retain a youthful appearance and to live a long, useful life.

As a further example of the devious ways in which the endocrine glands proclaim their unhappiness, there is the unpredictable thyroid, located at the front of the neck. Frequently any change in the normal functioning of this well-known gland may bring on ulcers in the stomach or in the upper intestine.

Here is the outstanding fact you need to keep uppermost in mind as you read on.

Made of Protein

Protein foods are hormone builders and conditioners. Therefore, a continued lack of high grade food protein in your diet can weaken these glands to seriously that old age has gained a head start in you almost before you realize it. Feed your glands—not your stomach—if you want to look and feel younger than the calendar says you are.

In addition to protein foods, iron and copper are important to your glands. Rich sources of iron are beef liver and other organ meats, dark poultry meat, lean beef and lamb, egg yolk, apricots, prunes, raisins, molasses, whole grains, lettuce, beet tops, leeks and radishes.

Copper is usually present in the foods containing iron, but especially in almonds, dried beans, whole wheat, prunes, calf and beef liver, shrimp and egg yolks.

And then there are the vitamins. Vitamins and hormones are interdependent. The regular use of a good vitamin mineral supplement makes nutritional sense—and protects your glands.

You can't be any younger than your glands. And your glands can't stay young and healthy if they are starved. Foods that befriend your glands are the best youth insurance you can buy.

Continued on the back. Eat and live young. A full and rich life. All rights reserved. Dr. Lelord Kordel. Specialty: Feat. Res.

Dr. Sisodia Heads Up Kingston Emergency

KINGSTON

Jitendra Singh Sisodia of India has more than just degrees from the University of Agra, University of Madras and Christian Medical College in Vellore, India. He has expertise in his field of medicine and projected dreams of an ultra modern set up in the treatment of emergency room patients.

As the doctor now heading up the emergency room at Kingston Hospital, Dr. Sisodia told the Freeman he envisions an emergency room center complete with proper ambulance approaches, its own operating room, trained personnel working as emergency teams and facilities permitting 48 hour observation of a patient before transfer to regular floors in the hospital.

This is not a new concept and it can be instituted here. We are hard at work on it right now, Dr. Sisodia said.

In this country and throughout the world, an emergency room center requires people who know their jobs and it requires facilities close at hand—a x-ray, blood bank, laboratories—so that when a patient reaches the emergency room, all these services may converge upon him, contrary to wondering where you are to get these investigations done, Dr. Sisodia says.

The hospital's emergency room doctor also stresses the importance of a strong liaison with the family physician and the doctor who initially institutes primary care.

There must be no gap in this relationship, Dr. Sisodia says. This is also why I personally subscribe to the concept of continued treatment of the ill for at least 48 hours right in an emergency room center.

The facilities in the proposed new Kingston Hospital will be able to meet these standards and I am looking forward to the time when we will have a group of doctors giving emergency care of a specialized type and nature in the emergency room, the doctor said.

Dr. Sisodia, who is married with two children, also served as a Fellow in Clinical Surgery, in French Hospital and was a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. His feelings are definite about being a physician, he says.

To be a physician is not a prerogative—it is a privilege. I was trained with this principle in mind. Service is what it is all about. The person who has been cared for is really appreciative.

Erma Bombeck

The Kids Have Ways of Getting Even

I get a lot of mail from teenagers.

Some of it is even signed. One asked me if I was really serious about raising the driving age to 35 (You bet your leaden foot, I am).

Another young reader said he found a way to shut me up for at least four years. He enrolled me in Nyack College in New York. (The computer has been bugging me for the past four months for my high school transcripts.)

The ones who really scare me half to death are the kids who have their own columns and can fight back.

One of them is Marc Albert, who writes a column for the Iowa State daily paper in Ames, Iowa. In a recent column he wrote, "Erma Bombeck is to the housewife what deodorant is to the armpit. But there has always been one subject on which she frequently writes that strikes a dissonant chord: children in general and teenagers in particular."

Marc goes on to reveal what for years parents have tried to suppress—the fact that children raise their parents.

It is difficult to raise your parents and make whole healthy, happy functioning members of society out of them. It can be the most frustrating thing a child ever does.

But as many kids have discovered it can also be one of the most fulfilling.

Now I've always believed that parents should be told the truth about sex. There are so many things they either don't understand, or else try to hide from. Obviously, Erma, something happened between the time you were married and the time your son entered your life. That something is called

"Dishpan hands?"

"No, it is called sex. It is a beautiful natural part of life. I know this is a lot for you to learn in one sitting. But just toss it over in your mind. After all, how else could you have had a son and a daughter?"

"By eating from the same fork as your father?"

C'mon, Marc. Fight fair. Whenever young people want to win one, they go for the parental Achilles heel—their reticence to discuss sex. (Especially with the kids who wrote the book.)

Parents are changing. We really are. We're more open now than we have ever been. Why on my dorm application for Nyack College beside the word sex I filled in FOR

Seeks Indian Love Secrets

DEAR ABBY I am a 35 year-old man who's in love with a beautiful 28-year-old divorcee. I want to marry her, but she keeps wanting more time to think it over.

In the meantime, she's seeing another man, and I'm afraid he has the edge on me. You see, he's part Kickapoo Indian, and I hear Indians are superior to the white man when it comes to lovemaking. Closely guarded tribal secrets on how to satisfy a woman are passed down from father to son. If there is any truth to that, I'm willing to pay whatever is necessary to find out.

Let me say that I was married for four years and I never had any complaints from my wife, but if Indians are better lovers than white men, I would like to find out why.

Maybe your readers can help. Thank you.

ED IN EAST ILLINOIS

DEAR ED I can offer two suggestions. Try The Bureau of Indian Affairs or the American Indian Movement.

DEAR ABBY With reference to that ding a ling who is seriously considering suing his parents for $100,000 for having had him circumcised as an infant—a barbaric surgery an assault on his person, which permanently maimed and disfigured him—in my opinion, he was circumcised at the wrong end.

YIDDISH MAMA SILVER SPRINGS, MD

DEAR ABBY I am a 50 year-old nurse who has been widowed for 15 years.

In the line of duty I took care of a very attractive well to do widower, age 59. When he left the hospital, he asked if he could see me again so we could get better acquainted. I agreed.

It took him nearly six months to call me, after which we started dating. I was on cloud eight! We've been going out for over a year now, and he proposed marriage.

My problem is that he admits that he is still seeing several other women and says that until he has a definite answer from me he will continue to date others.

Abby, this has turned me off on him and made me skeptical of his so called marriage proposal. I am losing my respect for him. If a man thinks enough of a woman to want to marry her, why would he want to date other women?

How can I say yes tonight when I know he had another woman in his arms last night?

FRUSTRATED AT 50

DEAR FRUSTRATED My guess is that he is trying to maneuver you into an early decision. If you want to marry him, say yes. And until you do, he's a free agent.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long self-addressed, stamped (26¢) envelope.

In either case, The Learning Center's unique program provides the answer. In just a few hours a week, many kids who can't read learn to and those who won't read learn to love it.

Jets To Name Holtz?

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina State football coach Lou Holtz was unavailable for comment Monday night on reports he would be named head football coach of the New York Jets.

Holtz canceled a speech Monday night before the Charlotte Sportman's Club and his office said he was out of town recruiting. Mrs. Holtz said she knew nothing of her husband's acceptance of the job, but she added: "There was some interest there, I know."

The New York Daily News said in its Tuesday morning edition it had learned that Holtz had taken the Jets' job. Jets officials in New York refused to comment on the reports.

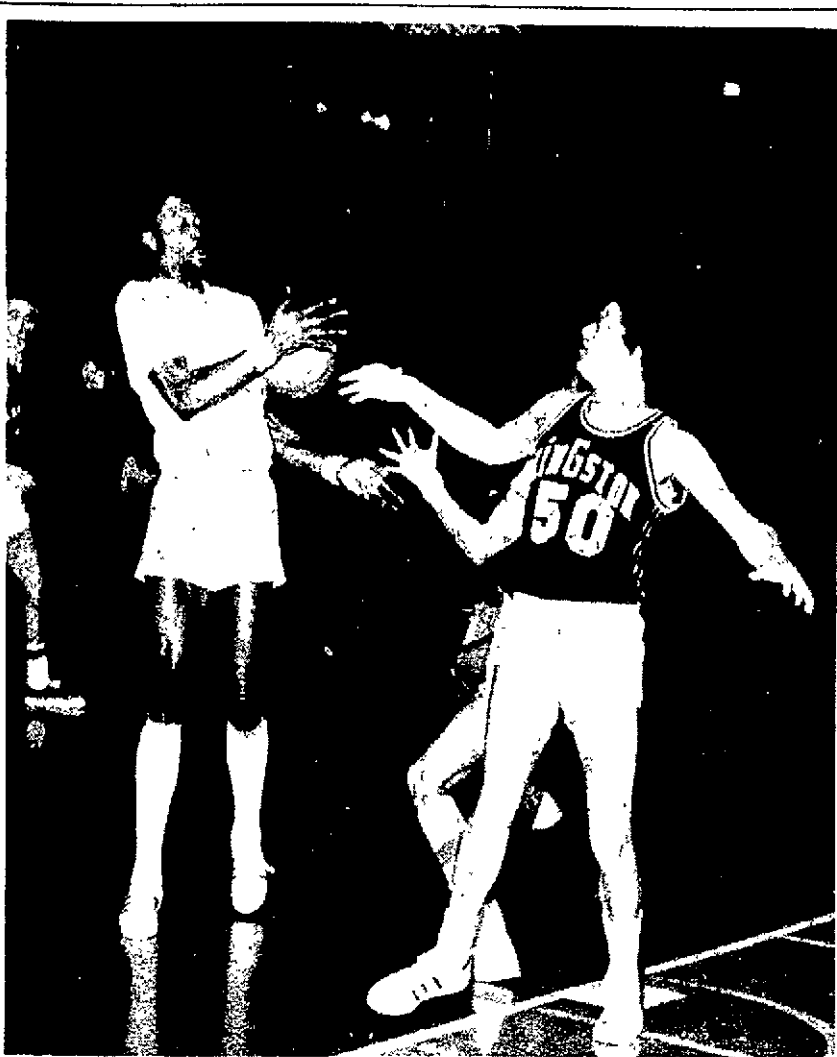

A official at North Carolina State told UPI, however, that "it was a good possibility" Holtz would go to the Jets.

Holtz was selected over five other coaches being considered for the post. They include Johnny Majors, head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh; Bud Carson, defensive coordinator for the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers; Dick Vermeil, who left UCLA Sunday to take over as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles; and Marv Levy, head coach of the Canadian Football League Montreal Alouettes.

If Holtz takes the job, he will succeed Charley Winner, who was fired Nov. 21. Offensive coordinator Ken Shipp took over for Winner on an interim basis and the Jets finished 3-11, the worst record in their 16-year history.

Holtz came to North Carolina State from William and Mary in 1972. He has not had a losing season since taking over the Wolfpack and has coached the team to four bowl games.

Holtz, a native of Follansbee, W. Va., was graduated from Kent State in 1959. He later received a masters degree from Iowa. He began his coaching career as an assistant at William and Mary from 1961 until 1963. He also served as an assistant at Connecticut, South Carolina and Ohio State before taking over as head coach at William and Mary in 1969.

Surprise

Harlem Diplomats' Twinkle Brown (L) wears a wild look of surprise as basketball falls in his direction during Monday night's exhibition game against a team of Kingston Schools Consolidated faculty members at Kate Walton Field House. Representing Kingston at right is Ron Chiasson (30), KHS' varsity soccer coach. Game, sponsored by the MJM and Sophie Finn Parent-Teacher Organizations, was won by Diplomats, 76-38. Local team was led by John Hunter's 10 points. (Freeman photo)

Big Game at KHS

KINGSTON It's Big Game time in DCSL basketball. With first place on the line, Beacon High invades the Kate Walton Field House tonight at 8 p.m. to face Kingston's Tigers.

The Bulldogs are currently one game up on the defending champs in the standings. Beacon has ten wins; Kingston has nine. Both clubs lost at John Jay, and when they met each other at Beacon earlier in the season, the Bulldogs sent their visitors home with a one point defeat.

One point. That has been the minuscule difference between the fortunes of these two teams this year. Another Beacon victory would change that picture, however. Then the southern Dutchess school would jump two games in front of the pack and be mighty hard to catch.

A Kingston win would create a tie for first, and then a comparison of schedules would favor the Tigers the rest of the way.

George Hughes will be the key player on the court. He is a powerful, 6-3 forward, the league's leading scorer, and the bulk of Beacon's attack. He poured in 36 points against KHS the last time.

How effectively the Tigers guard Hughes could decide the outcome. Drawing the assignment will be Mike Rienzo Jr., Kingston's "anti-superstar." Rienzo did a good second half job against Hughes last month.

Elsewhere in the league, Saugerties faces another difficult test at Roosevelt, Arlington will take upset hopes to Poughkeepsie, John Jay will be trying to win a road game at Lourdes and Spackenkill will pay a visit to winless Ketcham.

On the Ulster County Athletic League calendar, Marlboro is at Coleman, Rondout is at Ontario, Highland is at Fallsburgh, Wallkill is at New Paltz, Red Hook is at Pine Bush and Ellenville is at Liberty.

Mears Has Warning for Vols

Coach Ray Mears felt "super" about Tennessee's smashing victory over Vanderbilt Monday night but had a warning for the Vols that is as old as the game of basketball.

It goes like this: "The song of the open road can be the saddest song of all in basketball."

Mears wasn't that poetic about it but made it clear that

Tennessee's impending road games with Florida and Auburn could be the key to the Vols' season.

"The defensive play was super in shutting off Vanderbilt inside," he said after the 73-59 victory which raised eighth-ranked Tennessee's Southeastern Conference record to 10-1. "But we must win those road games against Florida and Auburn because Vanderbilt already has beaten them on the road."

The Vols tightened their grip on first place in the SEC as Ernie Grunfeld scored 24 points. Tennessee trailed 12-4 in the early going but took command early in the second half. In addition to Grunfeld's 24 points, Bernard King had 19 and Johnny Darden 12. Joe Ford had 19 points and Jeff Fosnes 18 for Vanderbilt, now 8-3 in SEC play.

"We were just outmanned," said Vanderbilt Coach Roy Skinner. "I'm glad they held it for a while toward the end of the game of they would have won by 25 points."

Indiana, ranked No. 1 nationally, defeated Michigan State 85-70 for its 50th straight regular season victory, seventh-ranked Rutgers beat Delaware 110-57, raising its record to 20-0, and 14th-ranked Michigan topped Ohio State 90-66 in the other big games Monday night.

Kent Benson scored 38 points and Scott May added 22 in Indiana's triumph over Michigan State. The unbeaten Hoosiers also made it a record 30 in a row in Big 10 play, including 11 this season. They led 46-37 at halftime and were in command the rest of the way.

Hollis Copeland scored 22 points as Rutgers roared to its 20th consecutive victory. The Scarlet Knights broke away from a 10-10 tie early in the first half and led 50-34 at halftime before turning over the game to reserves in the second half. Steve Schlachter scored 17 points for Delaware. Rickey Green scored 23 points and Wayman Britt added 20 to lead Michigan over Ohio State. Michigan never trailed after zooming off to a 6-0 lead. It was Ohio State's ninth loss in 11 games in Big 10 play this season.

In other games, Walter Jordan's 20 points led Purdue to an 86-58 romp over Northwestern. Illinois whisked away to a 14-point lead early in the first half and never fell behind in beating Wisconsin 70-59. It was Wisconsin's 10th straight Big 10 loss. Adrian Dantley's 27 points paced Notre Dame to a 95-80 win over St. Bonaventure. Georgia scored only its ninth victory in a 68-game series when Jackie Dorsey's 24 points paced the Bulldogs to an 86-81 triumph over Kentucky. Leon Douglas scored 24 points in Alabama's 79-73 win over Florida. Robert Gray had 20 points as Wichita State downed Loyola (Ill.) 79-77. Al Perry's two free throws after time had expired gave Mississippi State a 75-74 triumph over Auburn.

Nuggets 138, Nets 105

David Thompson, Dan Issel, Bobby Jones and Ralph Simpson all scored 20 points or better to lead Denver's scoring onslaught against New York. Thompson had 30 points, Issel 25, Jones 24 and Simpson 20 as the ABA-leading Nuggets soared to their eighth win in nine games.

Spirits 112, Seagulls 105

Marvin Barnes, who paced St. Louis with 22 points, sparked a fourth quarter surge that put the game away. Days 101-94 with 6:43 left, the spirits got to within five points of Virginia and then reeled off the final 12 to win going away. Besides Barnes' 22, Ron Boone and Fred Lewis each scored 19.

Immerfall Earns Bronze; Mahre's Bid Falls Short

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Dan Immerfall of the University of Wisconsin won a bronze medal for the United States in speed skating today but young Phil Mahre's bid for an Alpine Olympic medal ended in gallant failure.

Immerfall, 20, won his bronze in the men's 500-meters to bring the U.S. total to eight medals—five in speed skating—as the team surpassed the seven won at Sapporo, Japan, four years ago.

Mahre, the sensation of Monday's first giant slalom run when he took fourth place, was unable to get those extra few fractions of a second which would have vaulted him into the medals. He finished fifth but if he was disappointed, reigning champion Gustavo Thoeni of Italy was even more so. The overnight leader finished out of the medals in fourth place.

Switzerland's 27-year-old Heini Hemmi, a journeyman who never had won a race on the World C circuit in six seasons of competition, came up trumps with a two-heat time of 3:26.97 to win the gold medal from teammate Ernst Good and Swedish daredevil Ingemar Stenmark. Stenmark roared from eighth place in the first heat to grab the bronze medal.

Russia picked up two gold medals, through world record holder Evgeni Kulikov in the men's 500 speed skating and Raisa Smetanina in the women's 10-kilometers cross country, and with those two victories became the No. 1 nation in Winter Games history. Norway, with 47 golds dating back to 1924, was the previous record holder but the Soviets now have 48 and probably will add a few more before the Games close Sunday.

Early in the day, East Germany, which dominated the single luge running, added the men's doubles title through Hans Rimm and Norbert Hahn.

Phil Mahre, 18, of White Pass, Wash., zoomed down from the sixth starting position in the first seeded group of 15 runners. He attacked the course in gutsy fashion, cutting every one of the 73 gates close to save those vital fractions, and finished in 1:42.62 for an overall time of 3:28.20.

For brief minutes, Mahre's names was on top of the leader board.

Stenmark, 19, was the next man out of the gate. The Swede, in his customary fashion of abandoning caution on a second run, blitzed his way down the 3,945-foot course, which had a vertical drop of 1,400 feet, and finished in 1:40.90—the best time of the day—and an aggregate of 3:27.41.

Stenmark was now in the lead.

Hemmi was the next man to go and when he finished in 1:41.56 for a 3:26.97, he had what proved to be the winning time. Thoeni followed him down the trail but was slow at the top and was clocked at 3:27.67 which left him in third until Good, going off in 12th place, closed with a 3:27.17 for the silver medal ahead of Stenmark.

Phil Mahre, was not upset at finishing out of the medals. "I skied to the best of my ability and you can take it from there," he said after the race, which was staged on a terribly icy course. Mahre said he was thrilled to have received a chance to ski in the Olympics and hoped to be back in 1980 when Lake Placid, N.Y., will act as host.

"It feels great. I finished in the top 10 several times this year, but this is a big race because it is the Olympics, so it really feels good." Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif., finished ninth in 3:31.77, Steve Mahre, Phil's twin, was 13th, and Cary Adgate of Boyne City, Mich., was 21st among the 83 starters.

Head Coach Hank Tauber said, "I am really proud of Phil's performance. The two Swiss medalists are nine years older than Phil and they used their experience and didn't make any mistakes. He didn't ski as well as he could, so he may have been trying a little too hard."

Thoeni, four-time winner of the World Cup and as big a favorite as any athlete to become the first man in history to win back to back Olympic GS gold medals, could only say "Oh, God," when asked what happened. To cap his discouragement, he spoke to Italian newsmen in German.

Immerfall, a music student at Wisconsin where he is majoring in the clarinet and minoring in the piano and saxophone, said, "I still don't believe it." A half hour after his race and he still couldn't believe he had won a medal.

Immerfall's medal was the eighth won by U.S. athletes at the 12th Games—the fifth by the speed skaters—and helped lift the team past the seven won at Sapporo, Japan, four years ago.

Immerfall, 20, beat Peter Mueller of Wisconsin, Wis., by 3-100ths of a second for the bronze medal, echoing what Coach Dianne Holm said when she warned the team, "medals will be won by 100ths of a second, so concentrate on your start."

The gold medal went to world record holder Evgeni Kulikov in an Olympic record 39.17 seconds. Teammate Valeri Muratov took the silver in 39.2 and Immerfall was clocked in 39.54.

The two medal-winning Russians broke the Olympic record of 39.44 seconds set by West Germany's Erhard Keller, but Kulikov's time was well short of his world record of 37.00 seconds set at high Russian training center of Alma Alta 11 months ago.

Mueller, who was eventually to finish fifth—Mats Walberg of Sweden slipped in between him and Immerfall—raced in the second pair and posted a target of 39.54 for the field of 30 to aim at.

Kulikov was in the next pair up and Mueller knew this wasn't going to be a gold medal day. Then came Walberg and the 21-year-old star from Madison, Wis., wasn't thinking in terms of the bronze medal.

Kulakova finished third behind teammate Raisa Smetanina and Finland's Helena Takalo, winner of the 5-kilometers last week, the race which got Kulakova in trouble with the International Olympic Committee after traces of the drug ephedrine were found in her urine sample.

Kulakova took nose drops to ease nasal congestion brought on by a bout of flu.

Skaters Upset Finland

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Steve Jensen scored two goals and Jim Warden turned in another superlative job in the net to lift the United States to a 5-4 upset over Finland today and keep the Americans in contention for an Olympic hockey medal.

It was the first success after two losses for the Americans, but their last two games in the round-robin tournament are against Poland and West Germany, the two weakest teams they have to face.

Finland, which had been picked for the bronze medal, also fell to 1-2.

Baseball Owners Optimistic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major League baseball and the Players Association return to the bargaining table today with the owners hoping to inject some life into the stalled negotiations in time to begin spring training as scheduled.

With spring training precariously near — only three weeks away — and an almost total lack of progress in negotiations to date, the owners met Monday to receive a report on the negotiations from baseball's Players Relations Committee.

The stodgy wall in the negotiations neither side has been able to overcome has been baseball's controversial reserve clause, but the owners were optimistic there would be some progress when the talks resume today.

The owners said it is fairly certain they will appeal Judge

John W. Oliver's ruling upholding Peter Seitz' arbitration decision, known as Decision 29.

Marvin Miller, the executive director of the Players Association, said there could not be negotiation on the issue at the

Swimmer Tim Shaw Sullivan Award Winner

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Tim Shaw, the teen-aged swimming sensation who set world records in three freestyle events last year, Monday was named the 46th winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy.

Shaw became the 17th Californian to win the coveted award, which is symbolic of the amateur athlete of the year.

Shaw, 18, received 1,840 points in the balloting, followed by Bruce Jenner, 26, decathlon world record holder from San Jose, Calif., 1,660 points; and Shirley Bahasholt, 18, the No. 1 female freestyle swimmer from Mission Viejo, Calif., 1,553 points.

Shaw's world records in 1975 included the 400 meters in 3:53.31, 800 in 8:09.6 and 1,500 in 15:20.91. He also shares the world record in the 800-meter freestyle relay in 7:30.54 with Long Beach Swim Club teammates Bruce and Steve Furniss and Rex Favero.

The Long Beach State freshman also won golds in the 200, 400 and 1,500-meter freestyles in the World Games at Cali, Columbia, last summer.

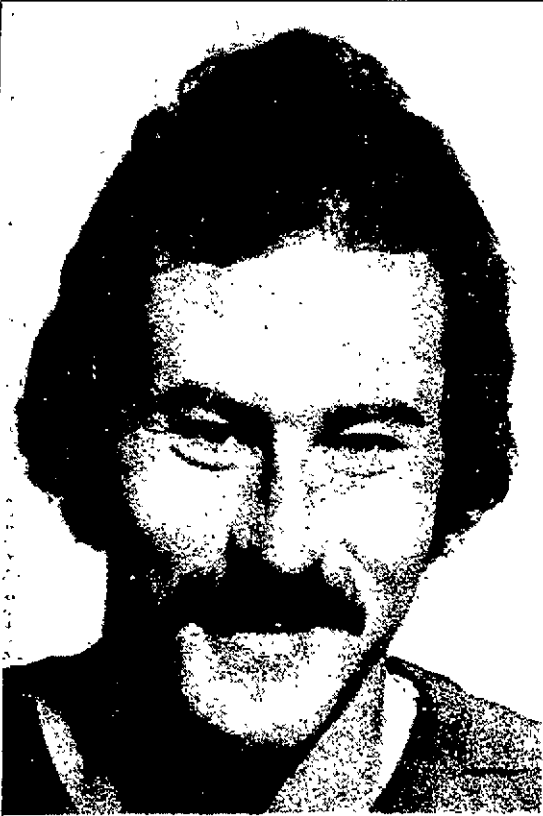

same time there is litigation.

The players are willing to continue under the current situation, with Decision 29 currently the prevailing law.

The key to the negotiations' success is how much the owners are willing to give in the battle over the reserve system.

The third, dismissal of a $32.5 million lawsuit against the A.L. filed by the state of Washington, King County and the city of Seattle, almost has been settled.

The state and county are willing to drop the suit, but Seattle is holding out for a $750,000 monetary damage settlement from the A.L. to recoup incidental expenses in fixing up Sicks Stadium for an expansion franchise in 1969. The Seattle Pilots were transferred to Milwaukee the next year.

Suspended

Beacon Firm Charged

POUGHKEEPSIE A Beacon manufacturer has been charged with two counts of violating the 1972 Federal Water Pollution Control Act based on investigations conducted by the Hudson River Sloop Clearwater.

Charges were announced by the U.S. Attorney's office of the Southern District of New York who gave credit to Clearwater's "Pipewatch" program for providing the information that led to the charges.

Beacon Piere, Dyeing and Finishing Company was charged with the violations, and is due to make its plea Feb. 17.

Research carried on by the Clearwater organization has produced considerable information concerning water pollution in the Hudson River. Tuck Industries, also of Beacon, recently pleaded guilty to 12 water pollution violations based on Clearwater evidence, and is due sentencing, also scheduled for Feb. 17.

"One of the reasons Clearwater sails is to bring attention to the destruction of the Hudson watershed," stated John Harris-Cronin, environmental action coordinator for the Clearwater. "It is our intention to continue to do all we can to bring polluters to justice and make environmental agencies more responsive to the Hudson's needs."

School Talk Slated

KINGSTON A public informational meeting sponsored by the Communications Committee of the Kingston Board of Education and the PTO President's Council will be held Thursday, Feb. 19 at the Myron J. Michael Junior High School.

Committee chairman Ronald Meyer noted that the meeting is designed primarily for parents of sixth grade students in the school district who will be entering Junior High School next September, but he added that any interested parent or resident may attend and participate in the discussion.

Meyer said that district officials at the meeting will endeavor to answer any questions from the audience concerning aspects of the school district. He said that no reasonable question will be ruled out of order.

It was originally announced that the meeting would be held at the Kingston High School Auditorium. It was later changed, however, to MJM. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m.

Consumer Pressure Cited

KERHONKSON The appointment of Belle Sundeen to the Citizens Advisory Council to the New York State Public Service Commission came as a "response to the pressure of the consumers," according to Nat Mantell of Concerned Consumers of the Mid-Hudson Area, Inc.

The board of Concerned Consumers agreed with Mrs. Sundeen that her presence on the Advisory Council might help to reverse the PSC's practice of "favoring the utility companies at the expense of the consumers," he said.

Consumer representatives, including members of the Peoples Power Coalition of New York will work in the direction of restructuring the rates to benefit the average consumer rather than the big industrial user, said Mantell.

Mrs. Sundeen, president of Concerned Consumers and last January elected state president of the People's Power Coalition, is one of 14 New Yorkers appointed to the PSC advisory post. Pauline Davis of Catskill, of the Safe Energy Coalition of New York State, will chair the group.

the case that was concluded April 30, 1975 when final judgment was handed down.

The successful suit against the State of New York has been carried for the past three years through Bruce J. Ennis of the NYCLU in its legal battle to obtain quality services for the mentally retarded in Willowbrook, Staten Island.

The Association for Retarded Children will now be represented by SOAR (System of Advocacy for the Retarded), a legal advocacy project based in New York City that works to secure and protect the rights of the mentally retarded in New York State. It is funded through the Developmental Disabilities Services Act. SOAR counselors will be Hyman Clurfield, Augustus Jacobs, and Jack Bernstein.

The substitution of attorneys resulted from the fact that the Review Board appointed to enforce the judgment does not have enough people familiar with community services, and there remains a long process of enforcing the judgment.

The New York State Association feels that the implementation of the decree will be the real test of the legal struggle for change within the Department of Mental Hygiene, according to a news release.

Buy Power for Senior Citizens

KINGSTON Ulster County senior citizens, 60 years of age or more, will soon gain additional purchasing power through the use of a county-wide discount plan being organized by the Ulster County Office for the Aging.

Mrs. Antoinette I. Tennant, director of the office, said 20 teams of senior citizens will be trained during February and March to check senior eligibility, simple data, fact sheets, photography, lamination of cards and issuance of card and booklet.

The entire interview may be completed in about eight minutes per person in all towns of Ulster County and the City of Kingston. Local teams will meet at sites convenient for senior citizens around March 15, at places to be announced.

Discount identification cards are available to all 24,000 Ulster senior citizens, including non-members as well as members of local senior centers. The present gold discount card, issued by the Ulster County banking community, will continue until the new card system is fully operative,

Mrs. Tennant said. All Ulster County stores and service centers have been mailed a complete explanation of the discount plan with enclosed form, on which each merchant is asked to state the specific terms under which the discount will be granted, and the percent of the discount. Each cooperating business will be given a window sticker to identify its cooperation in the discount program.

It is anticipated that 8,000 to 10,000 cards will be used in 1976. The program will continue in towns, as long as the seniors require it and will extend into the summer months.

There will be no charge for the first card. However, there will be a 50-cent replacement charge for lost cards.

DWI Rehab Course

STONE RIDGE
An innovative traffic safety program which will make it possible for conditional driver's licenses to be issued to some motorists convicted of driving while intoxicated will start Feb. 17 in Ulster County at Ulster County Community College.

The program — the New York State Drinking Driver Program — is being handled by the Office for Continuing Education at the college.

Under the program, mandated by the State Legislature, motorists convicted of DWI, or driving while ability impaired by alcohol, may attend classes designed to help rehabilitate themselves.

Most motorists enrolled in the program will receive "conditional" driver's licenses allowing them to drive under, and only under, limited conditions stipulated on their individual licenses.

The program was started to give many convicted drinking drivers, whose licenses are suspended or revoked, the incentive to try to rehabilitate themselves.

One condition of the license is that the driver enroll in and attend a 16-hour training course like the one being offered at UCCC.

Those behind the program

say it will give the courts a reasonable alternative to the traditional choice between drastic punitive action required by alcohol-related convictions that may cost a job and accepting pleas to lesser charges.

In the 16-hour program at UCCC, an attempt will be made to identify drivers with alcohol problems and to refer them, where appropriate, to professional treatment programs.

Further information about the course may be obtained by calling the Office for Continuing Education at UCCC.

Sales Tax Returns

KINGSTON
Ulster County and the city of Kingston both took a "conservative" view of sales tax revenues in 1975 and it paid off, in the county's case, to the tune of almost $250,000.

Ulster figured to receive $4.2 million in sales tax revenues for 1975. A recent report from the State Department of Taxation and Finance shows gross receipts of $4,445,488.

The city of Kingston figured receipts of $1,590,000 for 1975 and received $1,599,635. The county has a one per cent sales tax; the city's is two per cent.

For 1976, the county appears to be taking a more liberal view of its sales tax receipts, anticipating $4.7 million.

The city remains conservative, actually cutting its estimate by some $40,000, figuring on total receipts of $1,550,000 for this year.

The city of Poughkeepsie realized $1,792,125 from its two per cent sales tax. Poughkeepsie has about 7,000 more people than Kingston.

UCCC Seeks Adults

STONE RIDGE
Dean Ronald A. Koster of Ulster County Community College reports his office has found some difficulty in locating prospective participants for some "significant programs."

"This problem reaches critical proportions," he explains, "in regard to three of what we consider our more important offerings—high school equivalency, basic reading skills for adults, and English as a second language."

The former is offered at the college as a credit free course. The other two have been provided in the past through contractual arrangements with area business or industry, or with state or local social service agencies.

The college will provide counseling on financial assistance for those who are concerned about the ability to pay for instruction, said Koster, Associate Dean of Faculty for Continuing Education.

The college suggests that county residents recruit prospective students for the college.

PSC Approves Gas Plan

ALBANY
Eleven New York State gas utilities have been granted formal approval by the Public Service Commission to participate in a Gulf Coast onshore gas exploration program.

The PSC approved the Gulf Coast Research and Exploration Agreement in principle last Nov. 17, but denied the utilities' request for permission to finance the program through a surcharge on their customers' bills.

In its official order this week the PSC specified that its ruling "does not constitute approval for rate case purposes of any expenditures" in the program.

Operating as the New York Gas Group, the 11 utilities (including Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation) have agreed to put up $15.8 million to cover an 80 per cent share in drilling and completion costs and other expenses of the program.

"They projected production of an average of 7.8 billion cubic feet of gas annually over the first ten years, listing an average wellhead cost of about 22 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Rules GE Violation On PCBs

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A state Department of Environmental Conservation hearing officer has ruled the General Electric Co. violated environmental laws by discharging PCBs into the Hudson River from its Fort Edward and Hudson Falls factories.

Abraham D. Sofaer, in an opinion issued Monday in a hearing on an EnCon order for GE to stop all PCB discharges, said the company "will at a minimum be ordered drastically to limit its discharges as it claims itself willing and able to do."

The chemical — polychlorinated biphenyl — is used as an insulator in capacitors manufactured at the two plants. It is believed to cause cancer.

The company will also have to act to rectify the effects of its prior violations where lawfully proper, and economically and environmentally practicable," Sofaer said.

The Columbia University law professor named by EnCon Commissioner Ogden Reid to preside over the hearing also blasted regulatory agencies and the company for "bureaucratic insufficiencies."

"Neither the legislature nor the public," Sofaer wrote, should be deceived by this focus on GE's activities into assuming that government has otherwise dealt in a meaningful institutional fashion with PCBs or with other hazardous substances being discharged into our environment."

Sofaer said hearings will have to be resumed to determine to what discharge levels GE should be limited.

EnCon and the federal Environmental Protection Agency have proposed limiting GE to zero PCB discharge, a standard the company has said cannot be met with presently available technology.

The 77-page opinion said GE had violated two sections of the state's environmental conservation law covering general pollution and dumping of industrial wastes.

In Opposition to Carey's Budget Cuts

Massive Student Drive Planned

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Student associations at the state and New York City universities have promised "a massive student voter registration drive" in hopes of avoiding stiff budget cuts for both systems.

Robert H. Kirkpatrick, president of the Student Association of the State University, told a news conference Monday his group and its City University of New York counterpart would coordinate the drive with a grassroots lobbying effort in each state legislator's district against Gov. Hugh L. Carey's proposed budget cuts for higher education.

At the same time, Assemblyman Seymour Posner, D-Bronx, announced he has introduced a bill barring the elimination of either free tuition or open admissions at the city colleges.

In his $10.8 billion 1976-77 state budget, unveiled last month, Carey called for a 9 per cent cut in "state purposes" expenditures for SUNY and said he "anticipated SUNY action to increase tuition and dormitory charges."

"The over one-half million public university students in New York State are a different breed of citizen in 1976 than they were a decade ago," Kirkpatrick said.

"We intend to use our total energies to insure that our state lives up to its responsibilities to provide a quality and accessible public education to its citizens," he said.

Carey proposed state aid to CUNY "which will require severe cutbacks reduced enrollments, and quite likely, imposition of increased charges." The state Board of Regents is among those who have called for tuition for all CUNY students.

Maynard Jones, chairman of CUNY's University Student

Senate, attacked both Carey's proposed cuts in CUNY programs and those already made by the Emergency Financial Control Board, set up by the state to oversee New York City's fiscal recovery.

"Since the cutting process began, CUNY has been cut nearly $150 million," Jones said. "The results have been devastating."

"Faculty and administrators have been fired, fees have risen drastically, tuition for graduate students has skyrocketed, course offerings have been sharply curtailed, class sizes have bloated, library hours have shrunk and acquisitions of books have halted," he charged.

Jones said there would be "no compromise" by his group in the battle to retain free undergraduate tuition and open enrollment at CUNY.

Posner, a CUNY graduate, charged that, "To use a transitory budget deficit, as some officials want to do, as an excuse to abandon open admissions and free tuition is a sham perpetrated on the public."

"Let's face it, once tuition is imposed it will never be removed," he said. "Instead, it will probably increase year after year."

"For years, when CUNY enrollments consisted mainly of white immigrants' children, free tuition was never in doubt, even in the Great Depression," Posner said.

"Now that enrollment is increasingly black and Hispanic — the groups that suffer most from discrimination — we would be callous indeed to end open admissions and free tuition, slamming in the door of higher education in their faces," he said.

Let Albany know how you stand. NOW.

The State Court of Appeals in a ruling handed down in December, prohibits savings banks from continuing to offer NOW (payment order) accounts, which are similar in nature to checking accounts.

Also, the Court decision allows savings banks to continue servicing their present NOW accounts only through March 31, 1976.

The Court's verdict was announced after months of hearings which resulted from an action filed by competitive financial institutions in July, 1974. Less than two months prior to that date, the New York State Superintendent of Banks issued regulations allowing savings banks to provide NOW or Payment Order accounts.

The legal action against savings banks NOW accounts indicated that they "constitute unfair competition" and are in "violation of banking laws."

While rendering its decision, the Court, at the same time did say, "That savings banks ought to be permitted to offer checking account services, for which there is considerable local and national support, should be addressed to the Legislature and not to the courts."

Heritage Savings Bank is in total agreement with this invitation to the Legislature to act. Heritage should be able to offer checking accounts.

Savings Banks depositors in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey, among others, enjoy NOW or checking accounts.

Why not New York State savings banks depositors?

Since their introduction in 1974, the response to NOW Accounts at Heritage Savings Bank has been excellent. This indicates that you, our customers, like, need, want and deserve this service. Therefore, we don't feel it should be taken away.

We don't feel you should be discriminated against.

We're going to fight the Court's decision all the way. We feel we owe that much to the people who have helped support Heritage Savings Bank over the years.

You can help. And, we hope you will.

Let Albany know how you stand. Take a few minutes to write to your local legislator. Tell your representative you want action. And, you want it fast. That as a taxpayer and consumer you are entitled to have NOW or checking accounts at your savings bank.

You can also remind the men and women who represent you in Albany that the national trend is clearly broadened powers for savings banks. This includes checking accounts. And a bill containing that provision recently passed the United States Senate.

This is an election year — so you can be sure all legislators will be especially sensitive to all suggestions from voting constituents.

Below is a list of the people who represent you at the State Capitol.

Let Albany know how you stand. NOW!

Chrysler, GM Recall

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. and General Motors are recalling 22,000 cars and nearly 600 motor homes because of defects involving automatic speed controls, transmissions and steering systems.

Chrysler said Monday it has had 12 reports of throttles sticking on 1975 Chrysler Cordoba and Dodge Charger SE models because of improperly assembled automatic speed control systems. In two instances, the cars were involved in accidents, but there were no injuries, Chrysler said.

Chrysler said 19,000 of the 1975-model cars will be recalled for inspection.

A spokesman said the throttle could stick at the maximum acceleration because of the improper linkage. Should this occur, Chrysler engineers say a driver should shut off the engine and stop the car.

In the two GM recalls, the automaker said fewer than 10 per cent of the vehicles being recalled have the potential defects. To find those vehicles, however, GM is recalling 3,000 current model Buicks and Oldsmobiles and 575 GMC motor homes.

The automaker said it was recalling the 1976-model Buick Regal, Century, LeSabre and Electra models and some Oldsmobile Cutlass models because about 300 may have a defective transmission linkage.

GOP Choice Narrows

KINGSTON Ulster County Republican Chairman Albert Spada said today that the choice for "vice chairman for city affairs" (chief of the Kingston GOP Committee) has been narrowed to two men: Peter Graham, an attorney, and Frank Stauble, an insurance-

Graham is a First Ward committeeman. Stauble ran unsuccessfully for county legislature last year.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

ALMOST?: (Q.) Joe and I hang around each other a lot. I feel great when we are together, but my problem is that he has a girl friend. I know he doesn't really like her or we wouldn't spend so much time together.

Once he almost kissed me. We were at a phone booth at school. My friend came over and caught us so we didn't, but we would have.

His girl friend isn't pretty and she is fat. Joe is just feeling sorry for her. That's why he likes her. What can I do? I really like him and I know he'd be happier with me — 15 in Pennsylvania.

(A.) As far as I can see from your letter, Joe hasn't told you he doesn't like his girl friend, and he hasn't told you that he does like you.

You want it to be that way, however, and you have decided that that is the way it is. Sometimes we can fool ourselves very convincingly. I believe you have done that to yourself.

Slow down; get your feet on the ground. Until Joe takes some definite step to date you, or at least to declare that he likes you better than the other girl, don't build your hopes up so high.

WRONG GIRL: (Q.) I am going out with this girl, Kim. She is nice and treats me really good. But I do not much like her. The reason is that I like this girl Shelley, and she likes me too. How do I tell Kim I don't want to bother with her anymore? — Stuck in Massachusetts

(A.) You are not stuck. You do not have a contract for life to take Kim out. When you no longer want to take her out you can stop.

You don't HAVE to explain to her but it would be kind and decent to tell her the truth—that you like someone else and want to go with her.

You don't have to tell Kim who the other person is if you don't want to.

(Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

trump suit while two hearts were shed from dummy. Then South cashed his ace of diamonds and went into a huddle to end all huddles. East surely held eight clubs. He had played three spades and a diamond. Was his other card another diamond or a heart? Finally South decided to play for a 4-0 heart break. He led a heart, stuck in dummy's nine and had thrown away a slam.

If South had thought clearly he would have realized that East would have doubled six spades to call for a heart lead if he didn't hold any hearts.

Washington gurus AP-ARENTLY believe that credibility indicates what THEY believe the rest of us will swallow.

The truth of a matter sometimes is difficult to perceive through the hes of the beholder.

Ah—May! The month of budding tulips, and blooming idiots on the freeway!

We're all for flying super-economy but a reserved seat in a plane's wheel well is ridiculous.

Arrives

City officials gather around the Wicks fire truck which was delivered to Rondout Station for inspection last week. The Wicks truck was the last of three new 750-gallon-per minute pumpers ordered by the city two years ago. Rapid Hose got theirs on Oct. 4 while the Cordis truck was placed in service on Oct. 24, 1975. On the left are Fire Commissioners Sidney Halpern and Orvel Kimbark joined by Acting Fire Chief William Schreiber, Wicks Captain Robert Nagele and Mayor Francis R. Koenig. (Freeman photo).

Field Narrows for Road Boss

KINGSTON The field of candidates for the post of Ulster County Superintendent of Highways has reportedly narrowed to three men—Acting Superintendent Richard Gray, John Salapatis of Kingston and Kenneth Smith of Saugerties.

The Bridge and Highway Committee is scheduled to meet Wednesday to not only continue deliberations on a choice but to consider proposing a county law which would remove the requirement that a superintendent hold a professional engineer's degree.

Neither Gray, Salapatis or Smith hold such degrees.

A new superintendent is needed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation last year of Jose Camallonga Jr. at the height of a special committee and grand jury probe of the department.

Six More Months for Hudson Cement

KINGSTON Hudson Cement Co. has been granted a six-month extension of compliance with regulations of the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) concerning discharge of water into the Hudson River.

New dates for the schedule of compliance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act are May 30, 1976, for the engineering report; Oct. 30, 1976, for submission of final plans and specifications; Jan. 30, 1977, for start of construction; May 31, 1977, for end of construction; and July 1, 1977 for attaining effluent limits.

The permit issued to the company concerns discharges of water from the cement processing plant, where some of the water is allowed to evaporate, with the rest discharged into a settling basin. The discharge from the basin goes through a

Gray, who lives in Accord and was one of three general foremen who took over after Camallonga's resignation in August, was appointed to his post as deputy superintendent by a vote of the legislature.

Salapatis' name along with Gray's was mentioned for the superintendent's post almost immediately following Camallonga's resignation, with former Democratic Legislator Lewis C. Kirschner coming out publicly for Salapatis. A retired colonel of the U.S. Air Force, he has been employed by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation as project engineer. While attending City College of New York, he majored in civil engineering.

Smith who is supported by Saugerties Republicans, is employed by the State Transportation Department.

Put a Price on His Head

KINGSTON District Attorney Francis J. Vogt announced on Monday that a $500 reward is being offered by the WGHQ Justice Fund for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a male who entered an Emerson Street residence on Jan. 29 and attacked a 14-year-old girl.

Vogt said he has discussed the case with investigating officers and has been advised that there are no leads at present to the identity of the intruder.

"In view of the above, the WGHQ Justice Fund will offer $500 to any individual for information provided the Kingston city police or the district attorney's office leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the attack," Vogt said, explaining that the reward offer will remain in effect for 30 days.

Following the incident, detectives said the girl, who was not identified, was lying on the floor studying at her home at about 7 p.m. Jan. 29 when a man suddenly grabbed her from behind, held a hand over her mouth, dragged her into a bedroom and began to sexually molest her. The girl's attacker fled when she screamed, police said. He was described as being a white male, 5 feet 8 to 5 feet 10, wearing a brown ski hat and a blue jacket and jeans.

The reward is the first being offered by the WGHQ Justice Fund, formed in December and begun with personal contributions of $100 each from Vogt and WGHQ Board Chairman Harry Thayer. Thayer, in an "Editorial of the Air" at the time the fund was formed, explained that its aim is to aid in the fight against crime in Ulster County and that it was hoped $5,000 in contributions could be received for the fund.

Contributions for the fund can be taken or mailed to WGHQ, 82 John Street.

Enters Guilty Plea

KINGSTON John Whitworth, 21, of Napanoch, pleaded guilty Monday in Ulster County Court to third degree burglary.

The charge against Whitworth, who was represented by Attorney Albert Lonstein, stemmed from an alleged burglary at a southern Ulster County electronics firm last May. He had been indicted along with two others in the case last August.

County Judge Raymond J.

Mino set March 24 as the date for sentencing. Assistant District Attorney Paul Gruner represented the People at the time the plea was entered.

In other county court matters, an indictment charging Peter Medici, Steven Poirier and Paul Rivera with first degree sodomy was dismissed by Judge Mino on the recommendation of the district attorney's office.

The three were indicted on the charge in connection with a Jan. 1975 incident at the Ulster County Jail, where they were then inmates, being housed for Rockland County.

Third New Paltz Dorm Robbery

By Matt Spireng

NEW PALTZ For the third time in two weeks, armed robbers struck Monday night in a dormitory on the campus at the State University College at New Paltz.

One of four victims of the armed holdup was pistol-whipped and was listed in "stable" condition today at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

Police said the robbery occurred at about 11:30 p.m. in a dormitory room at DuBois Hall. Two males and two females, one of whom were identified, were in the room at the time. The robbers, said to include four Oriental males and one black female, knocked on the door to the room and forced their way in when one of the occupants opened the door. One male victim was pistol-whipped and all four of the victims were tied up while the quintet ransacked the room. They fled with more than $200 in cash and articles of clothing.

Police said the female robber, who carried a butcher knife, was about 5 feet 6, 115 pounds, with a black Afro hairdo, parted in the middle. The four males were said to be all in their early twenties and between 5 feet 10 and 6 feet. One was armed with a revolver and two carried knives, authorities said.

Edward Shannon, campus security head, said it is not believed the robbers are the same ones who struck two times previously in the past two weeks. On Jan. 26, three robbers, including an Oriental female, an Oriental male and a black male, made off with $380 after robbing a student in Lefevre Hall. On Jan. 30 two "dark-skinned" males robbed three occupants of a room in Bouton Hall, taking $40.

Thruway Fatal

A Glendale man was killed Monday afternoon in a one-car roll-over crash on the Thruway in the Town of Plattekill.

Police Beat

Arthur C. Chipp, whose ruling is pending the outcome of a post mortem examination today, said Manley was nearly decapitated in the crash.

Police said Mosher was driving south when his car ran off the road, traveled 350 feet along a ditch, struck an embankment, and flipped over. Another passenger in the vehicle, Frank Nosek, 25, of the Bronx, was taken to Kingston Hospital following the crash and was admitted. He was listed in satisfactory condition today.

Mosher and a fourth passenger, John Papkowich, 27, of Bayside, Queens, were not reported seriously injured in the crash.

State police said some of the occupants of the vehicle were pinned in the car. Police said the probable cause for the crash was speed too fast for conditions, adding that criminal action is pending.

Second Charge

A Barclay Heights burglary suspect who eluded police for about three hours Monday morning after being spotted in Turk's Arco Garage, Route 9W, by a Town of Saugerties patrolman has been charged in connection with a second burglary. Police have also arrested the owner of a used car lot in connection with the case.

State police BCI investigators and Saugerties Town Police charged John Polcastro, 22, of Glasco, who allegedly broke into the Arco garage, with a second count of third degree burglary Monday in connection with a break-in at another Saugerties gas station early Monday morning.

Police said that as a result of the arrest, search warrants were obtained for the home and business of J. Paul Whit-

Recovered

Ulster County Sheriff's deputies recovered a car stolen early today in the Town of Esopus after the auto crashed on Dashville Road in that town.

Deputies said an alert resident spotted the car, a 1971 Pinto, in a ditch on Dashville Road shortly before 7:30 a.m. Police said the person who stole the car apparently fled on foot following the crash and he or she may have been injured.
